BOARD OF TRADE HARD AT WORK

SHALL WE SECURE THE PIPE MILL

Its Up to Every Property Owner and Wage Earner.

Emporium Board of Trade in conjunction with our citizens, have been actively at work during the past week, endeavoring to close a contract for the locating of an extensive manufacturine plant at Emporium, employing at the outset from fifty to sixty men.

Last Thursday evening, at a special meeting of the Board of Trade, the committee consisting of Hon. Geo. J. LaBar, C. J. Goodnough, Esq. Hon. Josiah Howard and Andrew Brady, Esq., were authorized to meet the firm at Philadelphia. The committee made the trip east, returning on Sunday, having made a very satisfactory agreement, which was ratified at a meeting of the Board of Trade, Monday evening. The following were appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions: Hon. Geo. J. LaBar, C. Jay Goodnough, Esq., (President and Secretary of the Board) Hon. Josiah Howard, Allen Baldwin and D. A. McDonald.

The enthusiastic expressions of our citizens in favor of the project should be taken as an indication of success. Let all give liberally and aid in the advancement of our town. Let us all push—not hold back and hunt for an excuse to withhold your assistance. We firmly believe Emporium will rapidly forge to the front and that other industries will result from securing this important industry. It is fair to estimate that at least twenty-five families will locate here—at least one-half of the employees being skilled mechanics.

The committee have secured an option on the Hacket mill site and a plot of land near Howard & Co's old mill. The former will probably be accepted.

NOW PUSH.

Gone to Westboro.

Charles H. Edwards, of this place, went to Westboro, Wis., last Saturday to look over the work preparatory to accepting the position as superintendent of the big saw mills at that place. This position has for several years been filled by Mr. Joseph Lingle, formerly of this place. It is not known positively if Mr. Lingle and family will return to Emporium or if they will locate in Canada. There are current reports regarding both places. Mr. Edwards has for many years been woods superintendent for C. B. Howard Co., and if he accepts this position his family will move to Westboro.

Three Hours' Service.

Have you ever attended a Three Hours' Service? If not you have missed a very impressive and appropriate service. Such a service will be held in Emmanuel church on Good Friday, beginning promptly at 12 o'clock and lasting until three o'clock. All devout persons in the community are invited to attend this service, and it is not necessary to remain for the entire service. Come in and take your place quietly. You will fine a printed form of the service in the pews—when it is necessary to go, retire during the singing of a hymn.

Will Repair Defects.

Messrs. Costello & Neagle of Elmira, N. Y., the Broad street pavement contractors, were in town on Wednesday, looking over the work to note the defects, which they will repair in the near future or as soon as the frost is out of the ground. They are responsible gentlemen and carry out any contract they make.

MRS. MARGARET GANEY.

In Grateful Remembrance.

To the Editor of the Cameron County Press:—

I was pained to hear of the death of my old time friend, Hon. N. P. Minard, which occurred recently at Emporium. The first time I met Mr. Minard was in the fall of 1857, at which time I went to work in his saw mill, which was located on the Portage Creek, about one mile from Emporium. I worked in his mill the greater part of the following three years and each of these years we made two trips down the river on rafts, as far as Marietta or Columbia. At that time there were no railroads through that country, consequently the lumber had to be moved on the river. "Prov." Minard was one of God's noblemen—an honest man. His dealings with men as he met them in business was always honest and honorable. He was a man devoted to his family, kind and indulgent to them and I never heard him speak an angry word in his family. The same can be also said of his devoted wife, who survives him. In his prosperity, many years ago, he aften helped those who were less fortunate than himself. No doubt but those many acts of kindness and assistance that he rendered during his life were like so many meteors to light his way across the dark river; that a friendly hand was extended to greet him when he reached the farther shore, is the earnest wish and hopeful prayer of the writer.

Fifty-four years ago, when I first saw Emporium (then called Shippen), it was a busy place; there where thirteen saw mills within a radious of three miles of the village. The surrounding hills were covered with a dense growth of old white pine, with great logging camps where they were cutting logs for the big mills at Williamsport. I saw one million feet of lumber in logs, that was cut 12, 14 and 16 feet long, go over Minard's dam on the way to Williamsport and they averaged about five hundred feet to the log and great rafts of square timber on the river, each piece was 50, 70 and 80 feet long and made from the largest pine trees. I have seen 6,600 feet of logs loaded on one pair of bob sleighs and from up the Portage Creek to C. J. More's mill they were drawn by one team.

In those early days it was not an unusual thing to see 12 or 15 deer out on the hillside pasture, grazing with the cattle. The people as a rule, were temperate in that section, very seldom was a man to be seen under the influence of liquor.

Some of the oldest inhabitants of the Sinnamahoning Valley will recall the counterfeiting establishment that was located in North Creek, more than fifty years ago. In the winter of 1858 it was broken up and the principals were sent to state's prison. For a number of years they did a flourishing business. The building they occupied was a block house that stood about one mile up North Creek from the road leading to Pleasant Valley. In the construction of the house they used large square timbers to support the upper floor and into these timbers they cut square boxes in which was consealed the dies and other material used in counterfeiting. The floor was so laid that the boads directly over those recepticales were not nailed and could be removed at pleasure. The gold and silver coin was manufactured in the block house and the bills came regularly from Philadelphia and were countersigned at the block house. Men, who traveled in pairs, went all over the country, putting the "queer" in circulation. The leader of this gang was an old man; his hair was nearly white and his name was Stuttle. He had one daughter, a beautiful young woman, who traveled continually. It was said that she could dispose of more of their goods than all the rest of the gang. Her field of operation was the large cities, where she made small purchases and paid in bills or coin of large denominations, receiving the change in good money. The end came when one of the gang was arrested at Lock Haven. The proof of his guilt was positive and he confessed and gave a full account of all the operations on North Creek. Another of the gang was in the court house and heard the confession. In thirty minutes he was on horse back, headed for Stuttles, seventy-five miles away. He changed horses three times on the way up and reached North Creek twenty-four hours in advance of the officers who were sent to make the arrests. Stuttle would not believe that the man arrested at Lock Haven would give him away and he made no effort to escape. The officers came, but when one of the Sheriffs went up stairs and looked for the loose floor boards, Stuttle made a break for the woods. He ran quiet a distance before they caught him and put the hand-cuffs on. The officers then loaded up the whole outfit, including the prisoners, and drove to Emporium. They remained over night at LaGrand Cook's Hotel and left the next morning for Lock Haven.

The older readers will remember the disastrious financial panic that swept over the country in 1857. Great business houses went under and more than half the banks failed and closed their doors but the boys used to say at that time that Stuttle's bank stood up and did not suspend specia payment for a moment.

Following 1857, in the next few years, more than twenty-five young men went from my old home in Silver Lake for the pine woods of the Sinnamahoning, to work in the various branches of lumbering. The majority of these are dead. Among the living are my dear old friend M. T. Hogan, my cousin Michael McGraw and my brother D. C. Hayes, who are residents of Emporium. My brother, Thomas W. Hayes, who worked many months in Mr. Minard's mill on Portage Creek, is now the Rev. T. W. Hayes, Rector of St. Xavier Church, Gettysburg, Pa.

Badly Burned.

Mr. Leo Ross met with a very painful accident at the duPont Powder Plant shortly after the noon hour last Monday. He was holding a glass syphon of acid, which he dropped. The acid splashed up into his face, which is very badly burned. Dr. S. S. Smith dressed the injuries and Mr. Ross, accompanied by Mr. Robert Weiman, went to Williamsport on the afternoon train, where Mr. Ross will receive treatment at the private Sanitarium of Dr. Nutt. It was indeed very unfortunate and we hope that Mr. Ross will have a speedy recovery. Mrs. Ross went to Williamsport on Tuesday morning to be with her husband.

Word has been received from Mrs. Ross that Mr. Ross' eyes are not injured as was at first thought. He is getting along as well as can be expected.

Mr. Joshua Bair Injured.

Last Thursday evening, while Mr. Joshua Bair was returning home after visiting a sick friend on the Portage, had the misfortune to fall, breaking his right arm above the elbow, also dislocating the elbow. Mr. Bair was returning home, walking on the railroad and in attempting to cross over some cars slipped and fell, resulting in the above accident. Dr. W. H. Bush dressed the injuries and on the noon flyer on Friday Mr. Bair was taken to the hospital at Williamsport, where he is receiving treatment. Mr. W. G. Bair accompanied his father to the hospital, returning home on Sunday afternoon. Mr. Bair is getting along as well as can be expected. We sincerely hope that he will soon recover from the effects of his serious fall.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

HOGAN.

The community was greatly shocked and pained to hear of the death of our highly respected townsman, MR. MICHAEL T. HOGAN, which occurred at the family residence, early Tuesday morning, the cause of his death being pneumonia. Mr. Hogan had only been ill a few days and many of his friends did not know of his illness until the sad news went abroad of his death. Deceased has been a resident of Emporium since 1862, when he came here and worked at the lumber business for Dodge & Company, being employed at the same time as superintendent of their farm and other lands, comprising several thousand acres In 1872 Mr. Hogan entered the mercantile business in company with the late M. C. Tulis. Their store was destroyed by fire in 1875 and at that time deceased began the grocery business and was again burned out in 1884. He again embarked in business and met with success. Deceased was born in Susquehanna County, Pa., September 24th, 1842, and was therefore 68 years, six months and ten days of age. He was married at Emporium to Miss Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Powell, who with the following children survive the loving husband and kind father: Miss Celia, of New York City; Mrs. Nellie Gitchill, of Binghamton, N. Y.; Misses Julia, Kathryn and Master Harry at home. All being present at the bedside when the final summons came, calling the loved one to a happier land. His death was peaceful. He was a staunch Democrat in politics and held most of the offices in the borough, having served faithfully as Burgess and school director, was also a member of the town council. He served one term as post master of Emporium borough. Mr. Hogan was a devout member of St. Mark's Roman Catholic Church; was the soul of good nature and had a smile and kind word for all; never complaining. His little grocery store, which he has conducted for so many years, was headquarters for his host of loyal friends, where they spent many happy hours.

Ye editor, looking back to those busy times in Emporium when we first knew deceased, then a young man, full of life and sunshine, and we thought, one of the handsomest young men in this section. How well we remember when he led to the altar Miss Mary Powell, the pride of his heart, then considered one of Emporium's most beautiful girls. Many changes have taken place in Emporium within 44 years. We desire to lay this tribute upon the mound of our deceased friend. While we differed bitterly, at times, upon political matters, we were personally warm friends. Time heals all wounds and it is very pleasant to know that our friendship, of late years, was mutual and true. "Tammany Hall", dubbed by ye editor, is closed, the "boys" are sad and miss the little grocery store and its master spirit. While M.T. Hogan has passed beyond, many, very many times shall we recall the incidents that transpired in his store. As our friend grew older his views changed very materially politically, in fact he expressed to some of his friends his political intentions for the future, greatly to their astonishment. He was honorable in all his dealings and his word, we believe, was as good as a bond.

Farewell, friend. May you be rewarded in Heaven for the great wrongs you silently bore in this world and greet all your loved ones on that Beautiful Shore, is the profound prayer of your friend, the writer hereof.

The grim messenger of death has reaped a big harvest in our town within the past few months, taking many old residents and leaving many sad hearts. We can only say we must look to the Almighty Father in Heaven, from whom cometh our help and in the time of sorrow or bereavement look to Him for comfort and aid.

The funeral took place from St. Mark's Church this (Thursday) morning, High Mass being celebrated by the Rev. Father T. B. Downey, who spoke during his sermon, words of comfort and cheer to the bereaved family. The funeral was very largely attended.

The following casket bearers, officiated: Michael McGrath, A. A. McDonald, Hon. F. X. Blumle, Frank Mundy, H. C. Kenley and Joseph A. Friendell.

We believe deceased was a charter member of the C. M. B. A., and carried $2,000 insurance. This Association attended the funeral in a body.

The following relatives and friends were in attendance at the funeral: Mrs. R. J. Rogers (sister), Mr. and Mrs. (daughter) B. H. Gitchell, Binghamton, N. Y.; Miss Celia Hogan, (daughter), New York City; E. E. Breene, Rochester, N. Y.

Interment was made in St. Mark's Cemetery. Mr. Bernard Egan had charge of the funeral. The PRESS extends its sincere sympathy to the family and may his memory be his proudest monument.

MARINO.

Mrs. Francesco Marino, aged 25 years, died at the family home on Woodland avenue, last Friday morning. The cause of her death was pneumonia. Mrs. Marino was only ill a few days and her death was unexpected. Deceased is survived by her husband and three small children, the youngest being only two months old, and her parents who reside at Allegany, N. Y. The remains were taken to the home of her parents, on Saturday, the funeral taking place on Monday, interment being made at Allegany. Mrs. Marino was well liked by all who knew her, being quiet and industrous. Her death is a severe blow to her husband and aged parents. Mr. Bernard Egan had charge of the funeral.

A Distinguished Foreigner Passes Through Emporium.

Captain Hari Kari, the Mayor of Tiko, Japan, passed through Emporium Monday, enroute to San Antonio, Texas, where he will observe the battles just across the Rio Grand River. Captain Hari Kari unfortunately missed connections and was forced to wait over one train and was invited to dine with Mr. Nelson Cutler, the genial proprietor of the Junction house. As Mr. Cutler is a civil war veteran, he and the Japanese captain were soon engaged in an interesting conversation regarding war tactics and their talk proved very interesting to the guests of the house and the railroad men at the Junction. Mrs. Cutler, who has the name of being the best cook in this part of the state, did herself proud in getting up a dinner for the Captain, who went into ecstacies over the good Yankee spread that she placed before him. He felt so grateful that he concluded his visit with a little song in his own language and which was translated in English by Henry Haupt and is herewith submitted to our readers:

Tune, "The Girl I Left behind Me."

I've had a meal with the king of Spain,
In France I also dined, sir;
In London next, I ate roast beef,
And it was surely fine, Sir;
They used me good, they surely did,
And treated me most kindly;
But I'd rather eat Mrs. Cutler's food
Than all I've left behind me, Sir.
Her chicken waffiles are the best,
Her coffee is a dream, sir;
'Tis fit for kings, when seasoned up,
With foreman Johnson's cream, sir;
I'd travel clear across the earth,
To get a meal or luncheon
And shake the hand of Uncle Nelt,
Down at Emporium Junction, sir.

Moral—Read the PRESS and call on Uncle Nelt.

WORK FOR CONGRESS

ACTION ON RECIPROCITY QUESTION IS IMPERATIVE.

Common Courtesy to Canada Demands It, Says the Indianapolis News, Which Favors the Agreement Entered Into.

Immediately after the adjournment of congress the president issued his proclamation calling a special session to meet April 4. It is summoned solely for the purpose of determining whether it will enact such legislation as is necessary to make effective the reciprocity agreement with Canada. Had the late congress done this there would have been no special session. Those who are sorry to see congress come together again will, therefore, have to blame congress itself rather than the president. Obviously it would have been impossible to permit this agreement to be hung up for months. Such a course would have been most discourteous to Canada. Here is an agreement between the two governments, and the question is whether it shall be put in force. Canada has a right to know what we are going to do about it. Not only so, but the executive department of our government has pledged itself to do what it can to bring about ratification. In the presidential proclamation is this:

"The agreement stipulates that not only the president of the United States will communicate to congress the conclusion now reported and recommend the adoption of such legislation as may be necessary on the part of the United States to give effect to the proposed agreement, but also that the governments of the two countries will use their utmost efforts to bring about such changes by concurrent legislation at Washington and at Ottawa.

Common decency, therefore, demand that we make up our minds promptly on this question. The extra session was, therefore, necessary, made necessary by the refusal of the senate to allow the reciprocity bill to come to a vote. It is believed that the new congress will pass the bill. Certainly it ought to do so.

But though the president suggests only one line of action for congress it is not bound by any limitation. It may take up any subject it pleases. That at least a beginning will be made in the work of tariff reform is generally believed. The matter has been carefully considered by the Democrats, who will be in command of the house, and a general plan has been outlined. It ought to be possible at the special session to do something in the way of tariff reform that will greatly benefit the people. Conditions, it should be remembered, are peculiar. The president is interested in the subject. The Insurgent Republicans are convinced that the tariff is far too high. The old protectionists element has been greatly weakened in the senate. There is a general agreement that something is wrong with the tariff, and there is a general agreement, too, on the proposition that it is much too high. The Democrats will certainly try to do something to improve the situation. Indeed, it will not be easy to consider the reciprocity agreement apart from the tariff. Any discussion of the one is sure to provoke discussion of the other.—Indianapolis News.

The Extra Session.

If the chances of tariff agitation and actual or attempted legislation, in an extra session, can be considered disturbing to trade and industry, it is certain that the fear of what would surely happen in the regular session beginning next November would be more depressing and unfavorable. The extra session will get the worst of the business over with and out of the way as soon as possible. It will show what the Democratic majority in the house and the much strengthened Democratic minority in the senate mean to do and what they can do, and what they cannot accomplish.

Though much exhausted by his long fast, he is now recovering.

MARKS CHANGE OF METHODS

Ending of Speaker Cannon's Term of Office Has Deep and Unique Significance.

Speaker Cannon's term in the chair of the house ended in a scene of storm and strife—a fitting close. The half-threat uttered against him by an indignant member was typical of the later attitude of the house; his contemptuous defiance, in telling this member that he asked no advantage on the ground of age, was typical of Cannon himself. Like some war-worn admiral, he hauled down his flag when the time of retirement came, fighting to the last.

It has seemed a little odd, in recent months, to recall that popularity that Speaker Cannon enjoyed not so very long ago. His democratic ways, his outspokenness, his grim resoluteness all won him favor. He was even named among the possible candidates for president. But the house grew weary of his methods of rule—or the methods which he inherited—and of the policies which he approved and lent his energies to carrying out. In the struggle between the Insurgents and the Old Guard, his popularity vanished.

One of the chief things performed by the congress that has just gone out of existence was the clipping of the powers of the speaker of the house. Perhaps in time to come the house will make up its mind that it can accomplish more business, with less friction, by making its speaker the servant of the house, as in the case of the speaker of the British house of commons. But even as it is, with the departure of Speaker Cannon an era in the history of the house of representatives came to an end.

Mr. Bryan has never modified his remark that he is good for a total of eight presidential campaigns. What he proposes to do at the half-way point will be one of the political problems of 1912.

The President and the Tariff.

Nearly all the severe criticism of the president has been based upon his tariff record.

He was criticized for signing the Payne bill, and told that a veto would have immortalized him and saved his party. No clear reasoning accompanied the statement. He had made no secret of the fact that the bill did not fill his desires, and he had mentioned the wool schedule as a defect. But the bill had come to him with a large majority of the Republicans of both houses of congress at its back, and as it contained many things of which he approved he signed.

Suppose he had vetoed the measure. Would the special session have been prolonged in an effort to meet the president's wishes, or the matter been permitted to go over to the regular session? In either event the unrest in business circles would have continued, and the Republican party been held responsible. So far from saving the party the beating it got last November, a veto might have added to the size of the Democratic majority.—Washington Star.

Move Is a Wise One.

There is no good reason why the prospect of an extra session of congress should be looked upon by business men, or by any other class, as a thing to be avoided, even at heavy cost. President Taft's determination to call the senate and the house back to Washington immediately after the end of the present session, is not reckless or hasty. It is not an ill-considered attempt to bully the senate or force the administration program upon an unwilling congress. It is wise and timely action in the interest of progressive legislation and sound national policy. The worst that can be said of it by the most timid spokesmen of business interests is that it is the less of two evils.—Cleveland Leader.

Appropriate.

The donkey as the emblem of New York Democracy is quite appropriate, it will have to be admitted.—Rochester Herald.

Lure of the Spider.

Spiders have a number of ingenious ways of alluring and catching their prey. A writer describes an American spider which haunts evergreen trees, and snares its dinner by means of a kind of lasso. The web of the spider is triangular in form. Two corners of the triangle are attached to twigs, but the other corner, which ends in a single thread, is held by the spider, perched on a neighboring twig. When a fly strikes the web the spider loosens his hold and the elastic threads instantly entangle the victim.

Not the Time for That.

The tourist (hanging precariously on a shaky limb half-way down the precipice): And my Psychical Science doctor told me, when in a condition of great mental strain, to relax every muscle.

Ant and Mosquito.

A curious species of mosquito fed regularly by a species of ant is found in Java. It frequents trees where ants pass to and fro. It stops an ant and strokes the head quickly with forelimbs and antennae. The ant emits a drop of juice which the mosquito licks up, while the ant pursued its way. Another species of moquito is fed in the same curious way by the same species of ant. Another waylays and taps another species of ant.

The Hair Band

A BAND for the hair every hour of the twenty-four is the latest fad to which milady is devoting herself heart and mind. Apparently we have just discovered the neatness and beauty of bands for the hair, which should have been brought home to our intelligence long ago.

For wear in the daytime, the plain band, of black velvet or other ribbon, harmonizes with hair of every color, and lends a sparkle to gray hair which is particularly beautiful. Manufacturers are making bands of many varieties to harmonize with most of the shades of hair, of which there are innumerable gradations. These bands are for daytime wear, all about two and a half inches wide. They are finished with a flat bow and fasten with hooks and eyes.

For evening, wide lustrous ribbon, tulle net and spangled fabrics are used. The rosette is fastened just above the tip of the ear. Velvet ribbons in vivid shades of green—in coral and cerise, as well as black, are used with ornaments of rhinestone.

Even at night, wide soft ribbons are worn when the hair is put in rollers or on pins, to conceal them and render the head sightly. The back hair, braided in two loose braids, is tied at the end with a yard length of wide, soft ribbon. The braids are brought about the head with one length of the ribbon. The other ribbon is tied in a small bow a little to one side of the center of the brow. The band in the hair, finished with bow or rosette, is universally becoming. From babyhood to old age the ribbon in the hair is a feminine privilege of which we should make the most. It is not a matter of fashion, but a permanent institution. The adjustment, the width of ribbons and styles in the bands may vary, but the band, like the hair, is always correct. It is a finish to the coiffure, useful and beautiful.

DECORATIONS FOR BRASS BED

Idea That Makes for Comfort and Adds to Appearance of Room.

Brass beds look charming and attractive and often brighten an otherwise dark bedroom, but many people complain that they are far colder than an ordinary wooden bed that has a high head and footboard to protect them from drafts. To overcome this objection a clever woman devised a scheme which not only corrected this defect, but also added a decorative note to the room.

The hangings and window seat were made of gray chintz, having garlands of pink roses scattered over the surface. She bought more of this material and made covers that slipped easily over the brass rods at the head and foot of the bed. These were finished at the bottom with dainty frills of the material. A frill was also fastened around the mattress, which showed beneath the bedspread.

The covers were found not only to add much to the physical comfort, but were also useful in protecting the brass from the usual dents and scratches that are apt to come with the daily wear and tear of a much used room.

They were made to be removed easily if required for special occasions.

NIGHTDRESS.

This dainty nightdress might be made in nainsook or fine Indian calico; the fullness at neck is drawn up and set to a narrow band of beading edged with lace; ribbon is threaded through and tied in front. An insertion band is taken round below bust and ended off in points each side. The puffed sleeves are drawn in with insertion bands and finished with lace-edged frills.

Materials required: 4½ yards 36 inches wide, 1 yard insertion, 1¼ yard beading, 1½ yard wide, 1½ yard narrow lace.

GOOD FEATURE IN LINGERIE

New Undergarments That Can Be Laundered Quickly and Easily Anywhere.

When you see some of the soft, clingy and entirely adorable crepe lingerie which is shown in the French shops now you will simply throw discretion to the winds, take out the bill you were fondly cherishing for something or other and have the temptress—who in this case is the little saleslady with the queer accent—wrap up your pet piece. Then you'll hurry home to "try it on," revel in the possession of it and linger over the luxury of its dainty laces and fascinating ribbon bows.

And really you won't be so indiscreet after all, especially if you are a girl without the privilege of a home, because the crepe lingerie doesn't require a laundress to be made fresh and clean. Usually it is combined with real torchon or Irish crochet, both of which can be pulled into shape without the aid of an iron.

Many a girl who travels has found it impossible to gratify her longing for dainty underwear because of the uncertainties of laundering. After having it returned a few times torn and spoiled, she has settled down to plain garments devoid of any of the irresistible little feminine touches. For her the silk crepe idea will be a positive joy, for she can retire to her hotel bathroom and, with the assistance of a cake of good, pure soap, may restore her lingerie to its pristine glory and loveliness.

The new garments come in every weight from the heaviest silk crepe to the flimsiest crepe de chine, built into nightgowns, chemise, corset covers, combinations and petticoats. They are shown in white and colors and many are elaborately embroidered in self-tone silk.

Another idea for the traveler or the girl away from home is the Italian silk undergarment. It is most familiar as an undervest, but so popular and practical has it proven that it has been extended to cover the entire lingerie wardrobe.—Washington Star.

Patti and the Burglars.

Mr. Kuhe has a remarkable collection of autograph letters from notable people, and among them is one from Mme. Patti which relates to a visit paid by burglars to Craig-y-Nos. It contains the following: "I suppose the wretches heard that I had jewels and diamonds and imagined that I left them about loose in the house, always hanging up a few diamond necklaces in the hall with my hat and coat! However, it was an inspiration on my part, going upstairs just at that moment, and whilst in the corridor I began singing, which made them believe I was going into the room they were in, and consequently frightened them away. I knew my voice had done a great deal for me, but never expected it would save our house from being robbed."

His Creed.

Howell—Have you any creed?

Powell—I make it a rule never to be struck by an automobile before breakfast.

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. The doctors said I could not get well without an operation, for I could hardly stand the pains in my sides, especially my right one, and down my right leg. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle of Compound, but kept on as I was afraid to stop too soon."—Mrs. SADIE MULLEN, 2728 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

SUNSHINE AND GOOD HEALTH

Wherever Sun's Rays Penetrates Human Life Is Quickened and Health and Happiness Promoted.

The sunlight, with its mellowing warmth and radiance, is one of the great essentials to good health. Wherever it penetrates, in prudently regulated moderation, it quickens human life, promotes health and happiness, and may be truly regarded as one of the best friends of man and beast. The common practice of providing blinds, shutters, curtains and other means for shrouding the windows and shutting out the sunshine, is undoubtedly a great mistake, and makes for physical weakness and ill health. More window light, more sunshine, and not less, is what we require. Let all your apartments, kitchen, sitting rooms, parlors and bedrooms, too, be flooded with sunlight as much as possible.

Make Good.

"Wake up, Cull," says the burglar, shaking the man by the shoulder.

The man wakes up, and jumps up, too.

"I went troo dis house las' week an' got $100 an' a bum gold watch," explained the burglar; "an' de papers said dat you said your loss was $100 an' joolry to the amount o' five or six hundred."

"Ye-yes?"

"Well, make good, sport. Me pardner dat was watchin' on de outside made me cough up de difference between what I got and what you said I got. Now, you got to make good. You can't beat me dat way."—Judge's Library.

Professional Foresight.

"That fellow has a fearful nerve," said the dealer in firearms.

"Who is he?"

"An alienist. He says he will give me a commission on his business if I will hand his card to every wild-eyed person who comes in and buys a revolver."

"How far did he get before stopping?"

"As far as the bookcase."

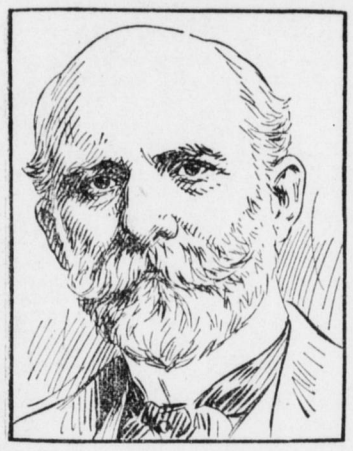
IN THE PUBLIC EYE

NEW MINISTER TO PORTUGAL



Henry Sherman Boutell, who has represented the Ninth district of Illinois in the national congress for the past 13 years, but who failed of renomination last year, has been nominated by President Taft as minister plenipotentiary to the new republic of Portugal, at an annual salary of $10,000. He succeeds Henry T. Gage of Los Angeles, Cal., who recently resigned the mission because of ill health and to look after his private interests in southern California.

Mr. Gage was appointed minister to Portugal in December, 1909, and was in charge of the legation at Lisbon when the monarchy of King Manuel was overthrown and the republic of Portugal proclaimed in May, 1910. He returned to the United States soon after that event, and never has been personally accredited to Dr. Braga, provisional president of Portugal. Since then the affairs of the American legation at Lisbon have been conducted by Mr. Lorillard, secretary of the legation.

At the state department it is declared that the appointment of Mr. Boutell to the Portuguese mission involves no change in the status of the diplomatic representative of this government at Lisbon, and makes no change in the diplomatic relations between the United States and the new republic. According to this statement, Mr. Boutell will continue in the same relationship to the provisional government of Portugal as the charge d'affaires whom he succeeds.

Several members of the diplomatic corps maintain that the appointment of the new minister to Portugal is, to all intents and purposes, an official recognition by the United States of the new republic of Portugal, regardless of the view of the state department officials on that point.

SILENT MAN OF THE SENATE

The silent man of the United States senate is Winthrop Murray Crane of Massachusetts. Mr. Kean, Mr. Penrose and Mr. Wetmore could not be called babblers, but they are noisy and disorderly compared to Crane, and their economy of speech becomes wasteful prodigality measured by his standard of conservation. Crane would prefer to talk with his hands if he could make himself understood that way. The Massachusetts senator hates any kind of a racket. One could not imagine him banging a door, wearing squeaky shoes or summoning a page by clapping his hands. No sound heralds his approach as he comes down the senate corridor. He does not walk, he glides about. When nor gliding he is sliding, and when not sliding he is flitting. The only thing disturbed when Crane comes into the senate or goes out is the atmosphere—he makes a slight draft, that is all. It is not seriously believed that Mr. Crane can walk through a door without opening it, and yet the faculty he has of appearing suddenly, noiselessly and unexpectedly in places where there has been no sign of him an instant before, almost invites the conviction that he is more an apparition than a man and a senator.

When the clerk of the senate starts to call the roll, Mr. Crane is not in the chamber, and yet when his name is reached—and it is only a short way down the list—his voice answers "Here." Senators turn to look, and he is gone! Perhaps the swinging door leading to the cloakroom is still gently oscillating, if so it is the only sign that Mr. Crane's corporeal body had been there a moment before and that his voice did not come through the skylight.

MAYOR IS OUSTED BY WOMEN

The women of Seattle, Wash., exercising their political power for the first time, recently ousted from office Mayor Hiram C. Gill and elected as his successor George W. Dilling. While the women did not accomplish this work alone, they were in a large measure instrumental in bringing it about, so much so that the result would have been different had they not voted. Gill was elected mayor of Seattle a year ago by a majority of 3,300. Women were then denied the right of suffrage, but in November were clothed with that power. Almost from the start Gill's administration came in for sharp criticism.

As soon as the woman suffrage amendment to the constitution was adopted last November the movement to "recall" Gill under a provision of the city charter and elect a successor to serve the unexpired term took form and the women entered into the campaign with enthusiasm. The campaign was a bitter one. Half the women of Seattle who were enfranchised in November qualified as voters by enrolling their names and to them is due the fact that in the recent election the majority of 3,300 given to Gill a year before was reversed and his opponent, George W. Gilling, was elected by a plurality of 6,231. The number of women registered exceeded 20,000.

NEGRO NAMED FOR HIGH POST

One of the leading negroes of the country is William Henry Lewis of Boston, who was nominated by President Taft to be assistant attorney general of the United States. From obscurity and from the lowly conditions of a slave he has thus risen to his present position of trust and responsibility. He was born of slave parents in Berkeley, Va., in 1863, while the Civil war was raging in all its fierce intensity. At the age of 23 he went to New England and entered Amherst college, where he made rapid progress in his studies and became captain of the football team. He was the class orator at commencement, and won two of the main prizes of the college. He then entered Harvard, where he upheld his record of proficiency in his studies and developed into an athlete. For two years he played center in the football team and was later one of the coaches. On being admitted to the bar he began the practice of his profession in Washington and during the administration of President Roosevelt was appointed assistant district attorney.

MANNER OF CONSTRUCTING PRACTICAL SHEEP HURDLES

Great Objection to More General Use of Devices Seems to Be Their Liability of Blowing Over—Materials to be Used.

The great objection to the more general use of sheep hurdles seems to be their liability to blowing over. I submit illustrations of some that offer less resistance or are better fortified against the effects of the wind, writes Richard H. Mitchell in the Country Gentleman.

Fig. 1, while not strictly a movable hurdle, is, nevertheless, considered as such, and is the one in most common use. I can only give measurements from memory, but should say that they were 10 feet long and 5 feet high when set up. The figure shown is made of sawed stuff, but they are more often made of split saplings; the construction, however, is precisely the same. Holes are made with a bar, and they are set end to end and pinned together at the top. These, like those supported on the A crutch, form a perfectly straight fence, which is not so proof against the force of the wind as one built zig-zag or worm fashion.

In Fig. 2 I have shown two panels that are intended to be set up in this manner. The left-hand end of panel b slips in the right-hand end of panel a, and a section of the fence is shown in Fig. 3. These panels are supposed to be 10 feet long and 4 feet high, and the lumber 1 by 5-inch stuff, but these dimensions can be varied to suit the idea of the user. With these dimensions, however, the distance between the end uprights on panel ought to be 11 inches. On panel a the end uprights ought to be 15 inches from either end. This ought to make the fence worm about 4 feet. As can be readily understood, more or less worm will be given to the fence by moving the second upright from either end in panel a.

A panel using wire instead of lumber seems desirable, and in Fig. 4 I have shown one that seems to me the most desirable, as combining the greatest strength with the least surface, and with the surface low. The panel, as there shown, can be used on the A crutch. Fig. 5 shows it modified, to meet the requirements of a worm fence. By substituting a post in the place of the end uprights, you have the Fig. 1 forms.

In Fig. 5 you will notice that I am not satisfied with cleats, but have introduced a bar sliding in a slot on the front side of the end upright and on the back side of the second upright. This makes a complete lock, and seems to me quite essential on that style of fence. I should also recomend the same device on the board panels, as on uneven ground one end might spring up and allow the panels to separate.

Of course on this skeleton any kind of wire can be used. Personally, I would not use barbed-wire of any sort as a gift. The illustration is intended to show a two-strand twisted wire, placed six inches apart, which is much closer than it is used on longer stretches, but that number of wires seems to me about right for a good job. They might be placed closer at the bottom and wider at the top, perhaps. That hurdle (Fig. 4) made with 4-foot uprights and 14 feet from end to end of upright, would weigh about 65 pounds, and cost about as many cents for material. The cost of the all-board one would not be much different, and it would weigh 40 pounds more.

As to manufacture, I should say, as has already been suggested, that pretty close to where they are to be used would be the best place to make them, as one freight on the material would be saved. Machinery does not enter very largely into their construction; so nothing could be saved in that way. It ought not to require any great skill to saw up boards and nail them together, and also stretch wire on them, if that form was desired.

In drawing these hurdles, I have allowed the center uprights to come down as far as the others; in practice, it might be found better to make them shorter, especially if they were to be set up on uneven ground. The diagonals in Fig. 4, being on opposite sides of inch uprights, will of course be an inch apart where they cross. I should not fill this in, but draw them together in nailing, as it will make the frame all the stronger. Hemlock is probably the best material for making these, and it would undoubtedly last enough longer to pay to have it dressed. If ordered in carload lots, enough would be saved in freight to pay for the dressing. If the ends of the uprights that stand on the ground were dipped in hot coal tar, they would probably last as long as the rest of the panel.

Fig. 6 shows an iron that I think would be a great help in clinching the nails. A slot is cut in the end of a flat piece of iron, so that it will slip easily on the nail, and it is beveled from the slot to either edge. By slipping this on the nail, the end can be bent over at more than a right angle. The iron is then slipped back, as shown in the illustration, and the nail bent over and driven into the wood, as shown to the right. For fencing stacks and turning corners, both ends of the panels would have to be alike, instead of reversing, as shown in the cut. If this fence should prove reasonably wind-proof, it ought to solve a large problem in fence economy, as very much less fence would be needed if the fence could be easily moved from place to place as occasion demanded.

It would be absolutely wind-proof around a stack if locked with the sliding-bar, and would have the advantage of being movable when the ground was frozen.

Choking on Oats.

Some horses eat so greedily that they become choked on oats. We have one that troubled us in that way, so we often had to send for a veterinarian, who inserted a tube down her throat to dislodge the grain, says a writer in an exchange. Later he told us how to avoid the trouble in this way: He advised us to place a dozen or more smooth stones, the size of a small hen's egg, in the feed box, taking care to have them well distributed through the oats. This compels the horse to eat less greedily, as he must eat carefully to avoid biting on the stones. We had no further trouble as long as we owned the horse.

Succulent Feed for Cows.

One of the most practical ways of supplying succulent feed for cows, when one has only a small herd and does not have ensilage, is by raising roots such as mangels, rutabagas or stock carrots.

WHERE WOMEN DRAW THE PLOW

A great many Russian peasants are going into western Canada, and as many of them are poorly equipped for farm operations, they work in the co-operative plan. These Russians settle in villages according to their custom in their native land and when there are not enough horses to draw the plows, the women of the village act as substitutes. It is said to be not an uncommon sight to see a dozen or more women attached to a plow by a long rope on which there are fastened at intervals sticks of wood which may be placed against the breast or across the arms to aid in pulling.

EYES WOULD BURN AND STING

"It is just a year ago that my sister came over here to us. She had been here only a few weeks when her eyes began to be red, and to burn and sting as if she had sand in them. Then we used all of the home remedies. She washed her eyes with salt water, used hot tea to bathe them with, and bandaged them over night with tea leaves, but all to no purpose. She went to the drug store and got some salve, but she grew constantly worse. She was scarcely able to look in the light. At last she decided to go to a doctor, because she could hardly work any more. The doctor said it was a very severe disease, and if she did not follow his orders closely she might lose her eyesight. He made her eyes burn and applied electricity to them, and gave her various ointments. In the two and a half or three months that she went to the doctor, we could see very little improvement.

"Then we had read so much how people had been helped by Cuticura that we thought we would try it, and we cannot be thankful enough that we used it. My sister used the Cuticura Pills for purifying the blood, bathed only with Cuticura Soap, and at night after washing, she anointed her eyes very gently on the outside with the Cuticura Ointment. In one week, the swelling was entirely gone from the eyes, and after a month there was no longer any mucus or watering of the eyes. She could already see better, and in six weeks she was cured." P. R. R. TO HELP BOARDS OF TRADE

Will do all Possible to Assist in the Development of Progressive Towns.

Announcing that the Pennsylvania railroad is ready to co-operate with Boards of Trade and commercial organizations in the location of new enterprises in the cities on its lines, W. J. Ross, division freight agent at Harrisburg has addressed to these commercial bodies a letter entitled "Suggestions for Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce, Business Men's Leagues and other Social Civic organizations Seeking to Promote Local Development."

The Pennsylvania's announcement to these trades bodies closes by saying:

"The Pennsylvrnia Railroad Company has enlisted for the war and will co-operate with you as far as it consistently can, if you will now and periodically hereafter, take account of stock and keep the undersigned fully informed as to the local advantages and other inducements you have to offer, to those seeking locations for new enterprises.

Quoting Woodworth Clum, editor of "Town Development" who recently made an address before the Lancaster, (Pa.,) Chamber of Commerce, Mr Rose' letter says:

"To promote sucessfnlly and solve the problem of local development, each of you must consider it as you do your individual business. What would it profit a manufacturer to erect a modern plant, equipped with the best up-to-date machinery and producing the best of a needed product, if he stored it in his warehouse and let it go at that.

"The community has something to sell: vacant building lots for houses, stores, warehouses or industrial plants or similar plants for rent or sale; merchants and manufacturers to be patronized and professional citizens to consult and a destiny to determine. The shelves of the local wareroom are filled with the commodity called local advantages. Is this stock covered with the dust of years or hidden by a curtain of cobwebs and have its owners forgotten their warehouse and its salable contents?

"In these modern days of keen civic competition the handle of the big front door of the warehouse must be polished and the dust and cobwebs banished and the world advised of the quality, nature and utility of these wares, by advertising and exploiting them as we do in private business. For what is true of it, is equally and in greater degree true of the community's interest, for without active co-operation neither can thrive, hence the campaign of local promotion and development is no longer optional. There are three essentials to mental activity. First, to interest; second, to convince; third, to force action. Every citizen worthy the name is interested and it is comparatively easy to convince him of the necessity for action if supremacy is to be won, but the difficulty is reached in forcing action. You can hold meetings, talk things over and agree upon what should be done, but the fighting volunteers are usually few and the majority are prone to shift the burden of work and worry to other shoulders, forgetting that united action is essential and every man's shoulder must be put to the wheel to insure success.

"Carefully assemble and compare your local advantages. Eliminate the disadvantages as far as practicable. Consider your resources, bear in mind present development, determine the character of development needed and for which your locality is best adapted, then spread the news and tell the world about it. A city set on a hill cannot be hid, and your community must not hide its light under a bushel. When in contemplative mood, we are prone to reflect upon 'piping time of peace,' but if if you imagine that these are days of peace, it is because you cannot or will not hear the roar of battle. The battle is on, one of the greatest conflicts in American history—that wholesome, uplifting, good natured conflict between American Communities for supremacy. It is no ordinary battle, this conflict between American Communities, for although contending with one another we are at the same time fighting a commen enemy, it is legion with spies and pickets everywhere. It has three closely allied generals, Apathy, Lethargy and Inaction. They are deeply and strongly intrenched they think, but these trenches are only the ruts that so often retard but must never be allowed to halt, the march of progress. Under the leadership of Enthusiasm."

HOTEL'S GREAT PIPE ORGAN

Largest Musical Instrument of the Kind in America Is in the Astor, New York.

The Hotel Astor, in New York, boasts the largest pipe organ in the United States and one of the largest in the world. A pipe organ is an innovation in hotel fixtures, and as such is of more than usual interest.

The great organ represents all orchestral instruments, and its many speaking stops, nearly 100, make the tonal resources of the instrument almost inexhaustible. It is divided into four distinct divisions, the main organ occupying two chambers on the east and west sides of the ball room. The other two divisions are arranged on either side of "L'Orangerie" room. Completely hidden from view by the decorations of the walls and ceilings, the music comes as a surprise.

The pipes, varying from 32 feet in length to only a fraction of an inch, are hundreds of feet away from the playing cabinet containing the keys and stops, and each one is operated by its individual train of electro-pneumatic action. The pressure of a key gives current to a wire that finds its way through various cables and switches to a magnet, which operates pneumatic mechanism that opens a valve and gives pressure to the pipe.

HAYTIAN CUTLERY SALUTE

Steward of Naval Vessel Put Knives and Forks in Gun and Hotel Was Punctured.

Discipline aboard men-of-war belonging to tropical countries is not as strict as that obtaining on the vessels of colder countries. Indeed, in some instances, it is very lax.

The Defense, a Haytian naval vessel, was lying in the harbor of Port-au-Prince. One day a mess cook, for some reason, cleaned about a peck of knives and forks on the gun deck, and, being suddenly called away, and not wishing to spend time to go to the galley, he seized the messpot full of knives and forks and stuck it in the muzzle of the ten-inch gun, putting the tampion in after it. About an hour afterward the admiral came aboard, and, as the gun was loaded with blank cartridge, they used it to fire a salute.

It happened that the gun was aimed toward the town, and almost point blank at the Grand Hotel. The guests assembled on the porch to witness the ceremonies, when they were saluted with a rain of knives and forks, which stuck against the wooden walls like quills on a porcupine. Fortunately no one was hurt, although there were many narrow escapes.

Need for Two Collars.

Having bought a dog that he admired a Washington Heights man undertook to buy a dog collar. The dog had a neck nearly as big as his head and the dealer advised the man to buy two collars.

"What for?" said the man. "He's got only one neck, so I guess he can get along with only one collar, can't he?"

"Maybe so," said the dealer, so the man went away leading the dog by his new collar and chain.

In less than a week he brought the dog back.

"I'm afraid I can't keep him," he said. "He is too obstreperous. I can't keep him tied up. His neck is the biggest part of him and he is as strong as an ox, therefore it is a sinch for him to slip his collar off."

"That is why I wanted you to take two collars," said the dealer. "Put both on and fasten the chain to the back collar and he can tug away all night without getting loose. He may commit suicide, but he won't get loose."

Plague of Monkeys.

Awaking from her sleep to find that 15 monkeys had taken possession of her house and were disporting themselves in her parlor and dining room, was the recent experience of Mrs. Lippman, Los Angeles. Mrs. Lippman tried to dislodge the monkeys, but failed. The following day she appeared at the prosecuting attorney's office and demanded a warrant for the arrest of Antonio Ryder, her next door neighbor, who she asserts instigated the invasion. Ryder is a trainer of monkeys and dogs. Two of his canines, which preferred Mrs. Lippman's clothes basket to their own kennel as sleeping quarters, were poisoned recently. Ryder suspected Mrs. Lippman of administering the poison and she asserts he sent his band of monkeys into her house in an effort to be revenged.

WHAT WOMAN LIKES IN MAN

Pleasing Manners, Deference, Courtesy and a Vigorous, Healthy and Well-Groomed Appearance.

A woman likes pleasing manners in a man. She likes deference and courtesy and attentiveness in small things. Manners often make more of an appeal to her than sterling worth. That's the reason foreigners make such headway with American women. They never forget to be deferential and courteous, to say the little things and to do the little things that warm the cockles of the feminine heart. This may be all wrong. Perhaps she ought to appreciate the character more than the veneer. But she doesn't. The average woman isn't practical. She's romantic. She likes roses and bonbons. Many men give her cabbage and beefsteak. Cabbage and beefsteak are all right, but as a steady diet they are tiresome. She'll take less cabbage and beefsteak if thereby she may have some roses and bonbons.

A woman likes a man to look healthy and to be well groomed. She likes a vigorous body, a healthy skin and a look that betokens a daily acquaintance with the bath tub, not merely because she likes beauty, though she does, but because these things betoken good habits.

A woman, if she is a wife or a sweetheart, likes expressions of love. She gets tired of taking a man's love for granted. It grows faint and faraway, and life is cold and commonplace, when he does not tell her in actual words he loves her, and show her by actual caresses, how much. To some men, this seems all foolishness. They think that paying bills is the best proof of their love. But again, most women are not practical, and bills are uninteresting things, not half so enjoyable or warm and vital as a kiss or a caress.

QUEER THING IN BIRD LIFE

Fantail Pigeons Hatch Out a Bantam Chick but Have Trouble in Feeding It.

The following experience, says a writer in the Strand, I have recently had may be of interest to your readers. I have two fantail pigeons, both male birds, and I noticed one day that they built a nest and then were sitting on it alternately, as if they were going to hatch eggs. It struck me that it might be a good idea to put an egg of my bantams into the nest to compensate the pigeons for the trouble they had taken in building it. Apparently they appreciated my doing so, as from that time they never left the nest for about three weeks, when, to my great surprise, I found a little chicken peeping from the pigeon's nest. It was touching to see how the pigeons tried to feed the chicken by opening their beaks, like pigeons do, and inviting the youngster to help himself to the contents of their crops, which, of course, it refused to do, because it is a chicken and not a pigeon. The pigeons are very fond of the little one, and take it under their wings to keep it warm whenever it wants it, exactly as a hen treats her chickens.

The Women of Brittany.

To the casual observer the Bretonne is not attractive or even supremely interesting. As a femme de chambre she is clumsy, slovenly and rough of speech, lacking the graces and neatness of her Parisian sister. She shuffles about in felt slippers, her voluminous black skirts catch in everything, and if she waits at the table d'hote her method of handling cutlery is strongly calculated to sever one's jugular vein. She has no regularity in her work, and at the hour that she ought to be making beds she is probably sitting on the public staircase nursing her baby. She is generally married and, conversely, often ten years younger than you take her to be. To English eyes she is rarely beautiful. Her hair is strained tightly under her cap, her cheeks have seldom any delicacy of tint and her figure and motions are ungainly and awkward.—Wide World.

Queer Marital Relations.

Curious marriage customs prevail among the people dwelling in the Tangi Valley in India. Here it seems that the women are polygamous, and that several brothers possess one wife in common. The custom is said to be due to the poverty of the people. The children bear the names of all the husbands of the mother. How such a custom as to names works out in practice it is difficult to comprehend. The divorce customs are very simple. If the husband establishes that his wife is a bad cook it is a sufficient ground; and on the wife's side, if she can show that her husband fails to provide for the upkeep of the house she obtains relief.

Shock Alarmed Glasgow.

Severe earthquake shocks are rare in Scotland and therefore the districts surrounding Glasgow were thrown into a state of considerable alarm last week following a sudden jar and upheaval which lasted for a few seconds. The inhabitants rushed from their houses into the streets, thinking at first that the shocks were caused by an explosion at a gasworks. No serious damage was done, although the earth tremors caused many gas mantles to break. Buildings in Glasgow were shaken, crockery was rattled, and the girls in the telephone exchanges were alarmed by many bells being set ringing. The same area was shaken in 1858.

CAT WAS REVERED IN JAPAN

She Lived in Temples and Was Known as the Guardian of the Manuscripts.

According to a Japanese writer, the domestic cat appeared in his country at a relatively recent epoch, having traveled from China with the missionaries of Buddhism. In the middle the sixth century of the Christian era sacrifices were offered to the cat, which was known by all as "the guardian of the manuscripts."

"The guardian of the manuscripts" kept away the mice, who otherwise would have eaten the precious papyrus. In some instances placards were set in conspicuous places among manuscripts as a warning to the mice: Beware! The cat is here. She drives the mice. Portraits of cats were also placed in places frequented by mice.

The cats were revered. For a long time they were kept in the temples. But their beauty, their general desirability and the charm of their grace, affection for man, and adaptability to human conditions so appealed to the layman that one by one very gradually their kittens were permitted to leave the temples and to become the pets of the nobility. After entering the families of the high officials of the Empire they won their way into humbler households.

NEW WAY TO CURE BALDNESS

Work in Cold Storage Plant or Go to Arctic Regions and Your Hair Will Grow.

The latest "universal hair grower" discovered is a trip to the Arctic regions, or failing time and inclination for that, employment in a cold storage company. According to Sir Ernest Shackleton, the Antarctic explorer, extreme cold is one of the best means of strengthening the hair. In the course of an interview recently, Sir Ernest said:

"All of the men who went with me on the south pole expedition with one or two exceptions possessed stronger crops of hair on their return to civilization.

"Extreme cold undoubtedly strengthens one's hair. As our party approached nearer the south pole our hair grew more slowly, but became thicker and stronger."

An official of a London cold storage company, interviewed on the same subject, stated that there was not a bald-headed man in the employ of the company. He said that the men worked all day in a temperature of 20 degrees of frost and the cold undoubtedly made their hair thicker.

Covers Much Space.

A New York department store gets out a postcard which contains interesting facts for the curious. Here are some of the store's features which it mentions: Ten freight elevators, 26 passenger elevators, 120 flights of stairs, 1,020 telephone stations, 8,000 automatic sprinklers, 17 miles of pneumatic tubes with 370 stations, 22,000,000 pounds of steel, 221,400 cubic feet of concrete in foundations, a mile and a half of showcases, 25 miles of steam circulation pipe, 2,406 steel columns, 24,040 incandescent lamps, 45 show windows with the largest plate glass in New York, 5,250,000 bricks used in erection, 540,000 feet of copper wiring for lighting, 390 separate departments, 250,000 square feet, or nearly 27 acres of wood flooring, which gives the floor space 800,000 square feet of plaster surface, 100,000 square feet of outside window glass.

American Robins in England.

An attempt has been made to introduce the American robin into Surrey, with apparent success. Six pairs turned loose last June near Guilford have reared about 40 nestlings. The name of our robin was given by the Pilgrim Fathers to the largest and most numerous of the American thrushes (Turdus migratorius), because of its red breast, and friendly association with man.

The American robin is closely related to our blackbird, and has a sweet, melodious song. Its introduction to Surrey will be regarded by market gardeners with much misgiving, for though his food consists chiefly of worms or insects, he works sad havoc among the cherries.—Westminster Gazette.

Character in Women's Walk.

An observing man insists that he can tell a woman's character by her manner of walking and the kind of shoes she wears. He says that the listless way of lifting one's feet indicates laziness or ill health. A heavy, flat-footed step means a good housekeeper, but an aggressive nature. A dragging, shuffling step denotes indolence of mind and body. He observes further that the woman who likes mannish shoes is not dainty or feminine, and that the ideal woman wears well-fitting shoes in the street and dainty slippers in the house.

Expensive Furs.

Actresses who wish to assert victorious power in their toilet have a mania for rich furs. The supply grows scarcer and the demand rapidly rises. The skin of the Andes rat now costs, first hand, 90 francs. It is this little animal that gives us the beautiful Chili fur, now so prized for motor wraps, stoles, muffs and garnitures. A further rise is expected, the Bolivian government having forbidden the export of the pelts of the Andes rats. Furriers have fallen back on the skin of the opossum, which costs but eight francs.

The THIRD DEGREE

A NARRATIVE OF METROPOLITAN LIFE

The Persistence of His Stare Made Howard Squirm.

SYNOPSIS.

Howard Jeffries, banker's son, under the evil influence of Robert Underwood, a fellow-student at Yale, leads a life of dissipation, marries the daughter of a gambler who died in prison, and is disowned by his father. He tries to get work and fails. A former college chum makes a business proposition to Howard which requires $2,000 cash, and Howard is broke. Robert Underwood, who has been repulsed by Howard's wife, Annie, in his college days, and had once been engaged to Alicia, Howard's stepmother, has apartments at the Astruria. Howard decides to ask Underwood for the $2,000 he needs. Underwood, taking advantage of his intimacy with Mrs. Jeffries, Sr., becomes a sort of social highwayman. Discovering his true character she denies him the house. Alicia receives a note from Underwood, threatening suicide. Art dealers for whom he has been acting as commissioner, demand an accounting. He cannot make good. Howard Jeffries calls in an intoxicated condition. He asks Underwood for $2,000 and is told by the latter that he is in debt up to his eyes. Howard drinks himself into a maudlin condition, and goes to sleep on a divan. A caller is announced and Underwood draws a screen around the drunken sleeper. Alicia enters. She demands a promise from him that he will not take his life, pointing to the disgrace that would attach to herself. Underwood refuses to promise unless she will renew her patronage. This she refuses to do. Underwood kills himself. The report of the pistol awakens Howard. He stumbles over the dead body of Underwood. Realizing his predicament he attempts to flee and is met by Underwood's valet.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

Howard was at no time an athlete, and now, contrasted with the burly policeman, a colossus in strength, he seemed like a puny boy. His cringing, frightened attitude, as he looked up in the captain's bulldog face, was pathetic. The crowd of bystanders could hardly contain their eagerness to take in every detail of the dramatic situation. The prisoner was sober by this time, and thoroughly alarmed.

"What do you want me for?" he cried. "I haven't done anything. The man's dead, but I didn't kill him."

"Shut your mouth!" growled the captain.

Dragging Howard after him, he made his way to the elevator. Throwing his prisoner into the cage, he turned to give orders to his subordinate.

"Maloney, you come with me and bring Officer Delaney." Addressing the other men, he said: "You other fellers look after things down here. Don't let any of these people come upstairs." Then, turning to the elevator boy, he gave the command: "Up with her."

The elevator, with its passengers, shot upward, stopped with a jerk at the fourteenth floor, and the captain, once more laying a brutal hand on Howard, pushed him out into the corridor.

If it could be said of Capt. Clinton that he had any system at all, it was to be as brutal as possible with everybody unlucky enough to fall into his hands. Instead of regarding his prisoners as innocent until found guilty, as they are justly entitled to be regarded under the law, he took the directly opposite stand. He considered all his prisoners as guilty as hell until they had succeeded in proving themselves innocent. Even then he had his doubts. When a jury brought in a verdict of acquittal, he shook his head and growled. He had the greatest contempt for a jury that would acquit and the warmest regard for a jury which convicted. He bullied and maltreated his prisoners because he firmly believed in undermining their moral and physical resistance. When by depriving them of sleep and food, by choking them, clubbing them and frightening them he had reduced them to a state of nervous terror, to the border of physical collapse, he knew by experience that they would no longer be in condition to withstand his merciless cross-examinations. Demoralized, unstrung, they would blurt out the truth and so convict themselves. The ends of justice would thus be served.

Capt. Clinton prided himself on the thorough manner in which he conducted these examinations of persons under arrest. It was a laborious ordeal, but always successful. He owed his present position on the force to the skill with which he browbeat his prisoners into "confessions." With his "third degree" seances he arrived at results better and more quickly than in any other way. All his convictions had been secured by them. The press and meddling busybodies called his system barbarous, a revival of the old time torture chamber. What did he care what the people said as long as he convicted his man? Wasn't that what he was paid for? He was there to find the murderer, and he was going to do it.

He pushed his way into the apartment, followed closely by Maloney and the other policemen, who dragged along the unhappy Howard. The dead man still lay where he had fallen. Capt. Clinton stooped down, but made no attempt to touch the corpse, merely satisfying himself that Underwood was dead. Then, after a casual survey of the room, he said to his sergeant:

"We won't touch a thing, Maloney, till the coroner arrives. He'll be here any minute, and he'll give the orders for the undertaker. You can call up headquarters so the newspaper boys get the story."

While the sergeant went to the telephone to carry out these orders, Capt. Clinton turned to look at Howard, who had collapsed, white and trembling, into a chair.

"What do you want with me?" cried Howard appealingly. "I assure you I had nothing to do with this. My wife's expecting me home. Can't I go?"

"Shut up!" thundered the captain.

His arms folded, his eyes sternly fixed upon him, Capt. Clinton stood confronting the unfortunate youth, staring at him without saying a word. The persistence of his stare made Howard squirm. It was decidedly unpleasant. He did not mind the detention so much as this man's overbearing, bullying manner. He knew he was innocent, therefore he had nothing to fear. But why was this police captain staring at him so? Whichever way he sat, whichever way his eyes turned, he saw this bulldog-faced policeman staring silently at him. Unknown to him, Capt. Clinton had already begun the dreaded police ordeal known as the "third degree."

CHAPTER IX.

Fifteen minutes passed without a word being spoken. There was deep silence in the room. It was so quiet that once could have heard a pin drop. Had a disinterested spectator been there to witness it, he would have been at once impressed by the dramatic tableau presented—the dead man on the floor, his white shirt front spattered with blood, the cringing, frightened boy crouching in the chair, the towering figure of the police captain sitting sternly eyeing his hapless prisoner, and at the far end of the room Detective Sergeant Maloney busy sending hurried messages through the telephone.

"What did you do it for?" thundered the captain suddenly.

Howard's tongue clove to his palate. He could scarcely articulate. He was innocent, of course, but there was something in this man's manner which made him fear that he might, after all, have had something to do with the tragedy. Yet he was positive that he was asleep on the bed all the time. The question is, would anybody believe him? He shook his head pathetically.

"I didn't do it. Really, I didn't."

"Shut your mouth! You're lying, and you know you're lying. Wait till the coroner comes. We'll fix you."

Again there was silence, and now began a long, tedious wait, both men retaining the same positions, the captain watching his prisoner as a cat watches a mouse.

Howard's mental anguish was almost unendurable. He thought of his poor wife who must be waiting up for him all this time, wondering what had become of him. She would imagine the worst, and there was no telling what she might do. If only he could get word to her. Perhaps she would be able to explain things. Then he thought of his father. They had quarreled, it was true, but after all it was his own flesh and blood. At such a critical situation as this, one forgets. His father could hardly refuse to come to his assistance. He must get a lawyer, too, to protect his interests. This police captain had no right to detain him like this. He must get word to Annie without delay. Summoning up all his courage, he said boldly:

"You are detaining me here without warrant in law. I know my rights. I am the son of one of the most influential men in the city."

"What's your name?" growled the captain.

"Howard Jeffries."

"Son of Howard Jeffries, the banker?"

Howard nodded.

"Yes."

The captain turned to his sergeant. "Maloney, this feller says he's the son of Howard Jeffries, the banker."

Maloney leaned over and whispered something in the captain's ear. The captain smiled grimly.

"So you're a bad character, eh? Father turned you out of doors, eh? Where's that girl you ran away with?" Sharply he added: "You see I know your record."

"I've done nothing I'm ashamed of," replied Howard calmly. "I married the girl. She's waiting my return now. Won't you please let me send her a message?"

The captain eyed Howard suspiciously for a moment, then he turned to his sergeant:

"Maloney, telephone this man's wife. What's the number?"

"Eighty-six Morningside."

Maloney again got busy with the telephone and the wearying wait began once more. The clock soon struck two. For a whole hour he had been subjected to this gruelling process, and still the lynx-eyed captain sat there watching his quarry.

If Capt. Clinton had begun to have any doubts when Howard told him who his father was, Maloney's information immediately put him at his ease. It was all clear to him now. The youth had never been any good. His own father had kicked him out. He was in desperate financial straits. He had come to this man's rooms to make a demand for money. Underwood had refused and there was a quarrel, and he shot him. There was probably a dispute over the woman. Ah, yes, he remembered now. This girl he married was formerly a sweetheart of Underwood's. Jealousy was behind it as well. Besides, wasn't he caught red-handed, with blood on his hands, trying to escape from the apartment? Oh, they had him dead to rights, all right. Any magistrate would hold him on such evidence.

"It's the Tombs for him, all right, all right," muttered the captain to himself; "and maybe promotion for me."

Suddenly there was a commotion at the door. The coroner entered, followed by the undertaker. The two men advanced quickly into the room, and took a look at the body. After making a hasty examination, the coroner turned to Capt. Clinton.

"Well, captain, I guess he's dead, all right."

"Yes, and we've got our man, too."

The coroner turned to look at the prisoner.

"Caught him red-handed, eh? Who is he?"

Howard was about to blurt out a reply, when the captain thundered:

"Silence!"

To the coroner, the captain explained:

"He's the scapegrace son of Howard Jeffries, the banker. No good—bad egg. His father turned him out of doors. There is no question about his guilt. Look at his hands. We caught him trying to get away."

The coroner rose. He believed in doing things promptly.

"I congratulate you, captain. Quick work like this ought to do your reputation good. The community owes a debt to the officers of the law if they succeed in apprehending criminals quickly. You've been getting some pretty hard knocks lately, but I guess you know your business."

The captain grinned broadly.

"I guess I do. Don't we, Maloney?"

"Yes, cap.," said Maloney, quietly.

The coroner turned to go.

"Well, there's nothing more for me to do here. The man is dead. Let justice take its course." Addressing the undertaker, he said:

"You can remove the body."

The men set about the work immediately. Carrying the corpse into the inner room, they commenced the work of laying it out.

"I suppose," said the coroner, "that you'll take your prisoner immediately to the station house, and before the magistrate to-morrow morning?"

"Not just yet," grinned the captain. "I want to put a few questions to him first."

The coroner smiled.

"You're going to put him through the 'third degree,' eh? Every one's heard of your star-chamber ordeals Are they really so dreadful?"

"Nonsense!" laughed the captain. "We wouldn't harm a baby, would we, Maloney?"

The sergeant quickly indorsed his chief's opinion.

"No, cap."

Turning to go, the coroner said:

"Well, good-night, captain."

"Good-night, Mr. Coroner."

Howard listened to all this like one transfixed. They seemed to be talking about him. They were discussing some frightful ordeal of which he was to be a victim. What was this 'third degree' they were talking about? Now he remembered. He had heard of innocent men being bullied, maltreated, deprived of food and sleep for days, in order to force them to tell what the police were anxious to find out. He had heard of secret assaults, of midnight clubbings, of prisoners being choked and brutally kicked by a gang of ruffianly policemen, in order to force them into some damaging admission. A chill ran down his spine as he realized his utter helplessness. If he could only get word to a lawyer. Just as the coroner was disappearing through the door, he darted forward and laid a hand on his arm.

"Mr. Coroner, won't you listen to me?" he exclaimed.

The coroner startled, drew back.

"I cannot interfere," he said coldly.

"Mr. Underwood was a friend of mine," explained Howard. "I came here to borrow money. I fell asleep on that sofa. When I woke up he was dead. I was frightened. I tried to get away. That's the truth, so help me God!"

The coroner looked at him sternly and made no reply. No one could ever reproach him with sympathizing with criminals. Waving his hand at Capt. Clinton, he said:

"Good-night, captain."

"Good-night, Mr. Coroner."

The door slammed and Capt. Clinton, with a twist of his powerful arm, yanked his prisoner back into his seat. Howard protested.

"You've got no right to treat me like this. You exceed your powers. I demand to be taken before a magistrate at once."

The captain grinned, and pointed to the clock.

"Say, young feller, see what time it is? Two-thirty a. m. Our good magistrates are all comfy in their virtuous beds. We'll have to wait till morning."

Profitable Glass Eye.

"Nobody is going to poke out a good eye just for the sake of getting a glass eye," said the city salesman, "but I know a man who makes money on his glass eye. He goes to Europe three times a year on business. While there he does a little trading in jewels as a side line. It is on the homeward trip that he turns his glass eye to good account. In the cavity back of it he carries two or three small but valuable diamonds. Half the duty saved is his commission on these stones alone. The customs inspectors have never got on to him. Naturally they can't go around jabbing their fingers into people's eyes."—New York Sun.

Doubting His Word.

Two Irishmen occupied beds in the same room. By and by one of them woke up.

"Mike," said he, "did you put out the cat?"

"I did," said Mike.

An hour later Patrick woke up again.

"Mike," said he, "Mike, did you put out the cat?"

"Sure I did," said Mike, sleepily. "On me word of honor."

Some time later Patrick again waked up.

"Mike," said he, "Mike, ye divvle; ye did not put out the cat."

"Well," said Mike angrily, "if ye will not take the word of honor of a gintleman get up and put her out yerself."

Encourage the Boys.

When a boy presents an idea that is feasible, pat him on the back and encourage him, and he will develop a love for agriculture and become the pride of your heart in your declining years and will love the homes and the farms that you have worked so hard to pay for.

If farming has not paid in your case by all means give the boy a chance to begin without your handicap. "What was good enough for me is good enough for the boy," is a maxim unworthy of a New England farmer. Give the boy a chance at an agricultural education and he will help you to stop the leaks and turn the past and present into a brighter future.

The widow of one of Ohio's most distinguished newspaper editors and a famous leader in politics in his day, says she is 70 years old and a "stronger woman than you will find in ten thousand," and she credits her fine physical condition to the use of Grape-Nuts:

"Many years ago I had a terrible fall which permanently injured my stomach. For years I lived on a preparation of corn starch and milk, but it grew so repugnant to me that I had to give it up. Then I tried, one after another, a dozen different kinds of cereals, but the process of digestion gave me great pain.

"It was not until I began to use Grape-Nuts food three years ago that I found relief. It has proved, with the dear Lord's blessing, a great boon to me. It brought me health and vigor such as I never expected to again enjoy, and in gratitude I never fail to sound its praises." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Is Your Dog Going Mad?

BY ARNO DOSCH

COPYRIGHT BY PEARSON PUB CO.

ANYONE can tell when a dog is going mad and prevent him from doing harm. The symptoms develop over a period of from three to eight days before the biting mania seizes him. Meanwhile he gives a hundred warnings. All that is necessary is to chain him.

That this piece of information has not been given publicity before, except in the case of a few New England towns, is due to the general lack of caution, but, with the alarming increase of rabies both in animals and men, it has become essential. Too many dogs are going mad every day. Something will have to be done about it. The disease is now so prevalent that it is pertinent to ask:

Is your dog going mad too?

This question may strike you as unnecessarily alarming, especially if you happen to live where there have never been any mad dogs. In that case you are to be congratulated. Places with such a record are becoming rare. Your turn may be next.

Left to spread as far as it might, with practically no attempt to stop it, rabies during the past few years has become thickly disseminated over the whole of the United States, except the far West. Along the Atlantic coast and in the middle West, both North and South, there is hardly a district unaffected by it, and each additional dog that goes mad is carrying it as far as he can travel in two or three days' time. It has arrived at the point where it threatens everyone, and, if it were not for the twenty-five or more institutions which are now giving the Pasteur treatment in the affected districts, the number of human deaths would be startling.

Three years ago rabies began to press itself upon public attention. Up to that time it had never appeared as much of a danger in America, although mad dogs had shown themselves at intervals for more than a century. Each in itself had always been a terrifying object, but the numbers were comparatively scarce.

Conservative estimates of the medical men and boards of health place the number of deaths annually from this dread disease at 20,000.

The question of what to do is also before this country. Two courses are open: policing and a study of the disease which may lead to its prevention.

Effective policing has always meant a rigid muzzle and leash law and the chloroforming of all stray dogs. But it has been proved to be successful. After centuries of terror over rabid animals, England, since 1897, has succeeded by this means in remaining rid of them entirely, and only a few months ago when some of the virus was needed in a research laboratory in Liverpool it had to be obtained outside the country. Berlin has practically eradicated the disease within the city following an epidemic during which a dog went mad on the streets every day. Paris, overcoming a sentimental opposition, reduced the mad dogs from 560 during the year 1901 to 10 in 1907, simply by compelling owners to look after their pets.

Attempts to stop the disease in this country have been spasmodic and hysterical. It has required the death of some well-known person or some unusual circumstance to awaken the police.

There are three types of rabies: furious, which we recognize; dumb, which we do not; and a mixture of the two. The furious is the most important.

The first action on the part of a dog which points to furious rabies is a marked and unusual restlessness. He jumps up constantly without cause and is hypersensitive to light and sound. He snoops in dark corners and licks everything nervously. He becomes effusive in his affection, and his master, wondering, feels that there is trouble, and asks the poor dumb brute what ails him.

Then, all at once, his disposition changes. He snaps suddenly, and the next instant wags his tail in apology for his action. In a moment he snaps again. Meanwhile he eats and drinks normally and shows no sign of paralysis, which we have been taught to look for when rabies is suspected.

The restlessness increases in a way that can hardly fail of notice, and then a night comes when he gives little gasping howls, which sound as if they had been choked off in the middle. Anyone who has ever heard this howl knows instinctively that there is something wrong. There is no confusing it with the ordinary barking at passing or imaginary objects, and it sounds nothing at all like baying at the moon. The howls are senseless and the hearer realizes it.

At first the dog remains near the house, giving his master ample time to take action. In fact he forces the attention of everyone within hearing and spreads a vague uneasiness. His howls get on the nerves of those within doors and they are rather apt to call out to him to be still. Some comment is probably made on the peculiar effect his howling has. A timid member of the household suggests that the dog is going mad, but the idea is scouted.

When this has gone on half the night, and the family is distraught for lack of sleep, the howls begin to grow fainter and the family falls into a peaceful sleep. But the dog has gone away to menace the surrounding country for fifty or a hundred miles. He wanders aimlessly, the disease gripping him tighter hour by hour, and when the morning comes, he is foaming at the mouth—a mad dog. The biting mania is on him, and he attacks everything, cattle, horses, dogs, cats, children. Fortunately the only other animal which gets the biting mania is the horse. The disease is spread in almost every case by dogs.

After two or three days, if he has not meanwhile been shot, he comes back, but, by this time, he has done his damage. He is weak in the hind legs, then in the fore legs. His eyes become covered with a film and his under jaw hangs down. Before long general paralysis sets in and he dies.

The warning which can hardly fail to be noticed is the howl, and, when his owner hears this, it is high time to act. He can be caught without much danger of biting, as a mad dog only attacks his master when the disease has completely captured his mind. But the saliva is already virulent, and gloves should be worn. Otherwise a little of it penetrating the skin or rubbed from the hand to a freshly shaved chin is enough to communicate the disease.

In dumb rabies the first sign is the dropping of the jaw. When this happens to a dog, it is only necessary to place a dish of water before him to discover whether he has rabies. He will lick at it, if rabid, but he will not be able to swallow, and the amount in the dish will remain the same.

As he cannot bite he is not very dangerous, but his saliva is as virulent as if he had furious rabies, and he should be kept apart. Usually a dog with dumb rabies is believed to have a bone in his throat, and some kindly person puts a hand in his mouth—literally into the jaws of death.

In mixed rabies the dog is more or less furious. He shows some of the symptoms of both the other forms.

About the only other diseases to which dogs are prone show themselves in a way not to be confused with rabies. Gastric trouble and rheumatism appear much as in human beings, and distemper is accompanied by coughing and sneezing, a high fever and running at the eyes.

The cardinal rule is never to kill a biting dog if possible to avoid it. Catch and chain him, and wait to see if the symptoms of rabies develop. If he is all right at the end of a week those he bit may breathe more freely, but, if he becomes rabid, they have no time to lose.

With the increase in rabies some knowledge of what to do for a dog's victims is as essential as a pocket supply of potassium permanganate in the rattlesnake country. Dr. George G. Rambaud, of the Pasteur Institute of New York, gives the following directions as first aid to the injured:

"The wounds should be treated like any other infected wounds. Bleeding should be encouraged, as a free flow of blood may carry off with it a great part of the virus. Then the wound should be thoroughly washed with any good antiseptic solution. The newer colloidal silver or silver-salt preparations are to be preferred, but, in their absence, iodine, a four per cent solution of carbolic acid, or even lemon juice, are useful."

Cauterization, the oldest treatment, Dr. Rambaud decries because, he says, it gives a false sense of security. But Dr. Anna Williams, who is devoting her life to the study of rabies in the research laboratory of the New York Board of Health, says she is willing to take her chances on cauterization, if the wound is not too deep. The average person, however, will prefer to take the Pasteur treatment. Since its discovery in 1884 it has been tried on more than 250,000 people, and of those who took it only one-half of one per cent have died.

On the subject of the disease itself there is not much room for question. The existence of the virus has been proved beyond all reasonable doubt by inoculating a whole series of dogs, one from another, and having each one develop the same symptoms and die in the same way. But, what has stood in the way of a greater knowledge, aside from the treatment, has been the doubt as to the nature of the virus. Some hold it is a bacterium, the lowest form of plant life, and others that it is a protozoon, the lowest form of animal life. Bacteria are subject to epidemics; the known protozoons are not. The layman can only hope for the protozoon conclusion.

The Pasteur treatment normally consists of injections into the flank of an emulsion of small portions of the spinal cord of inoculated rabbits dissolved in a salt solution. For bites on the hand or body, if the patient begins the treatment within a week, it is continued for eighteen days. If the delay is greater, it is continued for several days longer. Pasteur himself laid down the rules which have been followed more or less closely ever since. But experience has shown that this treatment is much less successful for bites on the face, where the reach to the nerve center is shorter. To meet the emergency face bites have given rise to, within the past two years a new treatment has been developed which immunizes the patient in twelve days. It is rather heroic, but it has been used a great many times without bad results, saving the lives of many who had no time to spare. Instead of using virus the virulence of which has been allowed to die out, as in the old method, the emulsion consists of a serum obtained from sheep strongly immunized against rabies mixed with fresh virulent virus.

The Pasteur treatment is only preventive. The serum meets and grapples with the virus on its way up the nerve to the brain. Once it has reached the nerve center, it defies treatmnt. But, if you do not know you have been exposed, your first intimation is after the virus is in the brain engaged in its fateful work.

Death from rabies has become too common to occupy a front-page position in the newspapers. That alone shows the prevalence of the disease. Tomorrow or next week, when you read of little children being bitten on the street, remember that one of those children might have been yours. Imagine, then, the furious animal rushing at your child, tearing at his face and body!—Is the picture too horrible?

It is happening every day. Your child may be next.

Now Joe is "It"

Joe Laver involuntarily discovered the best place to hide that he ever came across while playing hide-and-seek with a number of playmates at Third avenue and One Hundredth street, near an excavation for pneumatic tubes for the post office. Joe, who is four years old, disappeared from the ken of Isadore Ross, who was "it," as completely as though he had been drawn into the tubes. But it was not the tubes that got him.

"Issy" had just finished counting when he caught sight of Joe ducking behind a Third Avenue car. He was not sure, and ran around to the other side of the car to look, but there was no Joe there. "Issy" went and told Joe's mother he was lost. Twelve blocks away a number of boys ran out and pointed at the front of the car and shouted to the motorman. He brought his car to a stop. When he got out he found a small boy whimpering on the fender. That was Joe.—New York Tribune.

Not the Means, But End.

"Senator," the beautiful girl inquired, "are you in favor of being elected by the direct votes of the people."

"My dear young lady," the statesman replied, "I am enthusiastically in favor of being elected thus or in any other way that can be arranged."

This is said to be the quickest cough and cold cure known to the medical profession. Be sure to get only the genuine (Globe) Concentrated Pine. A census-taker while on her rounds called at a house occupied by an Irish family. One of the questions she asked was:

"How many males have you in this family?"

The answer came without hesitation:

All Snakes Are Killers.

But all snakes, great and small, are killers. All of them eat creatures which they slay. None eat vegetable food of any kind. Nor will they eat animals which they find dead. That is one reason, no doubt, why they have always been shunned and dreaded by human beings.

An object lesson is being taught to one of our "brave ones," who is at present in the county jail awaiting for Justice to carry out its decree. When a community becomes so aroused, and its people, after cool thought, have made up their minds about certain things, it is generally pretty hard to change their opinions. We have this to say, that if the parties concerned had lived in the south and had tried to carry on such games, that perhaps the neighbors too would have taken a hand and we can safely say not much sympathy would be shown either. We have no sorrow to express for him, but it does seem a bit strange that some of his "pals" den't go to his rescue. "Truly the way of the transgressor is hard."

Do It Now.

Emporium People Should Not Wait Until it is Too Late.

The appalling death-rate from kidney disease is due in most cases to the fact that the little kidney troubles are usually neglected until they become serious. The slight symptoms give place to chronic disorders and the sufferer goes gradually into the grasp of diabetes, dropsy, Bright's disease, graxel or some other serious form of kidney complaint.

If you suffer from backache, headache, dizzy spells; if the kidney secretions are irregular of passage and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. Help the kidneys at once.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney disorders—they act where others fail. Over one hundred thousand people have accommended them. Here's a case at home:

Cost of Transporting the Mail

According to statistics just compiled by the Railway Mail Committee from reports submitted on forms prescribed by the post office department by 187 railways, operating 178,710 miles on which there are 2,411 mail routes, the railways of the United States not only receive less compensation for handling the mails than they receive for handling express, but in proportion to the cost incurred by the roads and the value of the service rendered by them the compensation they receive for handling the mails is less than that received for any other service.

For the year ending June 30, 1909 the average earnings per passenger train mile was $1.27 while the average per freight train mile was $2.76. The average passenger train is 300 feet long and if it carried mail only in all its cars it would earn only 97 cents per mile. The railways receive less for mail than from either express or passengers. The other service rendered by passenger trains, while the total from the three is less than half of that received from freight. These figures are based on the amount the railways received for hauling one foot of car space one mile in the transportation of passengers, mail and express. In November, 1909, the railways hauled 1,153,110,245 feet of car space one mile in transportation of mail for which they received $3,721,796; 1,320,108,589 feet one mile in the transportation of express for $5,075,222.00 and 9,902,370,150 feet one mile in the transportation of passengers for $43,738,723.00. The average revenue per thousand foot miles, equivalent to hauling a train of twenty 50 feet cars one mile was therefore as follows: mail, $3.23; express, $3.86; passengers $4.42, the roads receiving 19 per cent. more per foot mile for hauling express and 37 per cent. more for hauling passengers than they received for hauling the mails.

This method of comparison was used as the railroads claim it is manifestly unfair to compare the rate per ton on mail and express since under the regulations and orders of the Post Office Department railway postal cars are limited to an average capacity of about three tons while express cars carry from 20 to 30 tons. The Post Office Department requires the railways to haul 22 tons of car for each ton of mail while the express companies comply with the demands of the railways that express matter shall be economically loaded.

In addition, the railways companies carry the mails between stations and post offices at six-sevenths of the mail stops. This service the Postmaster General has estimated would cost the Department $4,093,000.00 annually if rendered by it. No such service is rendered the express companies. Postal clerks are carried free while on duty and between the ends of their lines and their homes and the roads furnish annually $1,000,000.00 of free transportation to various postal officials. All these persons have the legal status of passengers and the railways are required to pay damages in case of injury. The express companies assume all such liability for their employes. The railroads receive pay for every pound of express they haul but under the system of weighing the mails only once in four years, the roads get no compensation for the carriage of the increase during this period, averaging 6 per cent. or about $3,000,000.00 worth of service per year.

From 1907 to 1910 the expenses of the Post Office Department increased about $40,000,000.00 but the railroads though they handled 22 per cent more mail, received $352,760.00 less in 1910 than in 1907.

Midnight in the Ozarks

and yet sleepless Hiram Scranton, of Clay City, Ill., coughed and coughed. He was in the mountains on the advice of five doctors, who said he had consumption, but found no help in the climate, and started home. Hearing of Dr. King's New Discovery, he began to use it. "I believe it saved my life," he writes "for it made a new man of me, so that I can now do good work again." Some Korean Superstitions.

The wildest superstitions are rife among the natives of Korea, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine. Everything is ascribed to the good or evil influences of invisible spirits, whom they strive to propitiate by incessant and petty sacrifices. The serpent is revered as sacred and fed as a domestic pet. Marriage is a question of etiquette and is arranged by the parents. A live goose is given as a betrothal gift, as a symbol of fidelity and long life. Filial piety is cultivated to a remarkable degree, a son considering it his duty to follow his father to prison or exile. Sacrifices of pigs, sheep and goats are offered to the firmament, to which they pray for rain or fair weather and the removal of plague and misfortune.

America Claims the Bean.

Until 1883 the bean was believed to have originated in Asia. Researches among the flora of ancient Peruvian sepulchres show that it was known in antiquity in Peru. No fewer than 50 different species have been found in the old burying places and 49 of the 50 were distinctly American. The sepulchres explored date back to the period beginning with the twelfth century and ending with the fifteenth. Within them was a great number of beans—so many that it is reasonable to suppose that beans held an important place in the agriculture of the ancient people of Peru. Probably the common dried bean of modern commerce was well-known in the antique world long before the discovery of Columbus.

"Filthy Lucre."

The expression "filthy lucre" is of biblical origin, and is to be found in the third chapter of the first book of Timothy, where the qualifications necessary for the office of a bishop are thus set forth: "This is a true saying. If a man desireth the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work. A bishop must then be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behavior, given to hospitality, apt to teach; not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, nor covetous."

Bogus Cloth.

What is Paint? Some people think anything labelled "paint" is paint, but there's a difference, just as much as between one kind of cloth and another. Cloth nine-tenths cotton and one-tenth wool, is bogus cloth. Cloth all wool wears to the limit. Paint at a price between 75 cents and $1.50 is like bogus cloth. The L. & M. Paint is all wool and wears to the limit. There's a reason.

Saved His Mother's Life.

"Four doctors had given me up," writes Mrs. Laura Gaines, of Avoca, La., "and my children and all my friends were looking for me to die, when my son insisted that I use Electric Bitters. I did so, and they have done me a world of good. I will always praise them." Electric Bitters is a priceless blessing to women troubled with fainting and dizzy spells, backache, headache, weakness, debility, constipation or kidney disorders. Use them and gain new health, strength and vigor. They're guaranteed to satisfy or money refunded. Only 50c at all druggists.

In cases of rheumatism relief from pain makes sleep and rest possible. This may be obtained by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. For sale by all dealers.

Do It Now.

Emporium People Should Not Wait Until it is Too Late.

The appalling death-rate from kidney disease is due in most cases to the fact that the little kidney troubles are usually neglected until they become serious. The slight symptoms give place to chronic disorders and the sufferer goes gradually into the grasp of diabetes, dropsy, Bright's disease, graxel or some other serious form of kidney complaint.

If you suffer from backache, headache, dizzy spells; if the kidney secretions are irregular of passage and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. Help the kidneys at once.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney disorders—they act where others fail. Over one hundred thousand people have accommended them. Here's a case at home:

His Frankness Won.

The late Senator Dolliver said that in politics it paid to be frank and honest with the people.

"My predecessor in the senate," he said, "was John H. Gear. On one occasion the prohibition spirit was running high, and a public meeting was held, with a well known Quaker as chairman. Gear was invited to the meeting. He accepted the invitation. The old Quaker called him to the platform and said:

"'We learn that thou dost not belong to any temperance society and also that thou dost drink liquor at thy discretion. Is this true?'

"'Every word of it is true,' replied Gear, 'but did you ever hear of my doing anything dishonorable?'

"'Nay, Mr. Gear,' replied the old Quaker chairman—'nay, we have never heard anything else to thy discredit. Thy frankness is more to be commended than thy habits. But thou hast not lied to us, and we will support thee.'

"And they did," said Senator Dolliver, "and elected him too."—Washington Star.

Her Bridge Prize.

A decided coldness between two women who had been friends for many years is the result of a mistake made by the maid of one of them who had had a four table bridge party one afternoon recently. In keeping with the custom, she had provided a prize for each table, to be brought to the card room just before tea was served and placed on the tables which bore the corresponding numbers. It was a "lovely party" in every respect, with never a hitch until the woman at No. 3 opened the parcel which was supposed to contain her trophy of victory over her three competitors, but which really contained a piece of perfumed soap. Unfortunately, the hostess was not in the group when the package was opened, and much had been said before she discovered that the wrong bundle had been brought downstairs.—New York Tribune.

The Seal's Marvelous Instinct.

The instinct of the seal is marvelous. It will leave its young on the ice in the morning and, going down through a hole, remain away all day swimming in search of food. Returning in the evening, it will locate its offspring in the same "patch" among hundreds of thousands of other baby seals notwithstanding that the ice may have wheeled or drifted fifty or sixty miles during the day from wind and tide and notwithstanding that the patch may extend thirty or forty miles from one end to the other. Whether this instinct is of the class that enables the bird without any mark or chart in a forest with millions of trees alike to find its way back with ease and precision to its nest I do not know, but it is one of those wonders in nature before which human knowledge is brought to a full stop.—Sir Edward Morris in Wide World Magazine.

The Jekyll and Hyde Idea.

"I was in Stevenson's company," says Charles Brookfield in "Random Reminiscences," "at the moment that he conceived the germ of the idea of 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.' He was inveighing against a man with whom he had done business and with whom he was dissatisfied. The man's name was Samuel Creggan, or something like it. 'He's a man who trades on the Samuel,' Stevenson declared. 'He receives you with Samuel's smile on his face, with the gesture of Samuel he invites you into a chair, with Samuel's eyes cast down in self depreciation he tells you how well satisfied his clients have always been with his dealings, but every now and again you catch a glimpse of the Creggan peeping out like a white ferret. Creggan's the real man; Samuel's only superficial.'"

The Louvre.

The Louvre dates away back to the reign of Dagobert in 628. In 1204 it was a prison and in 1364 was made into a library. The new building was begun by Francis I. in 1528 and enlarged and adorned by successive kings, principally by Louis XIV. But it was Napoleon I. who gave the Louvre its real glory. Turning it into a museum, Napoleon deposited in it the finest collection of paintings, statues and art treasures known in the world. The magnificent buildings of the new Louvre were begun by Napoleon I. and completed by Napoleon III. about 1857.

Not an Inviting Ideal.

"My son," said Harker as he pointed to the ivy in front of the cottage, "always be like the vine—climb."

The little boy was thoughtful.

"I don't think I'd like to be like that vine," he responded seriously.

"And why not, Tommy?"

"'Cause if I was I'd be a porch climber."—Chicago News.

Historic Beauties.

The famous beauties of the world are wise when they leave no portraits of themselves. Take Marguerite of Valois. She was an immoral, dishonorable, criminal, scheming, unscrupulous villainess, but she was dowered with such charm that there was not a jailer or an enemy she could not charm when she tried. No, nor a woman—not even the wives of her lovers. Men came from every country, taking year long journeys, only to see her and went away, after a little glimpse, saying they had "seen loveliness itself." Then one sees her portraits. Too much forehead, not enough eyebrow, a straight nose and expressive mouth (in one picture a lovely mouth)—and that is all. Mary, queen of Scots, was very lovely—three kingdoms battled because of her beauty—and yet her pictures leave one cold. Fouche said her portrait showed every trait of the lowest criminal type. That was before he knew whose picture he criticised.—London Truth.

Lost Meanings.

"Those who care for the beginnings of things may be glad that the quill pen survives to remind us that the original pen was plucked from a bird," observes a writer. "Germans and Frenchmen are in no danger of forgetting that, thanks to their respective words 'feder' and 'plume,' but the English 'pen' suggests a feather only when one chooses to think about it and recall the Latin 'penna.' Almost all our writing materials are no longer what etymologically they profess to be. Paper is no longer made of papyrus; a pencil is not a little tail 'penicillus,' like a camel's hair brush; the 'lead' of a lead pencil is not lead, and the 'india rubber' with which we erase its marks does not and never did come from India. Even of parchment there is probably not a fragment in the country, except, perhaps, in a museum and coming from Pergamum, in Asia."—Chicago News.

Life In the Icy Arctic.

In the morning I was generally the one to waken first and would either start the alcohol lamp myself or call Astrup for that purpose. Our morning meal consisted of a lump of pemmican, six biscuits, two ounces of butter and two cups of tea each. As soon as this was finished everything was repacked on the sledge. I then read the odometer, aneroid and thermometer and, taking the guidon, which had waved and fluttered over the kitchen throughout our hours of rest, from its place, stepped forward and the next march was commenced. After from four to six hours of marching we would halt for half an hour to eat our simple lunch of pemmican and give the dogs a rest and then after four to six hours of traveling halt again and repeat the already described route.—Robert E. Peary, "The Great White Journey."

Got Rid of the Scum.

She was a city bride who had never before taken a hand in housekeeping and knew but little about things in the kitchen. A few mornings ago she got after the milkman.

"What's the matter with your milk?" she said, with great vehemence.

"I don't know," he replied. "What do you find wrong with it?"

"Well," she said, "every morning it is covered with a nasty yellow scum."

"And what do you do with the scum?"

"Why, I skim it off, of course, and throw it in the garbage can."—Farmers' Guide.

Sacrificing the Woman.

That Carlyle could contemplate with equanimity being unpraised, unmoneyed and neglected all his life, that he required neither the world's pudding nor its breath and could be happy without them, was pardonable and perhaps commendable. That he should expect another person to share this unmoneyed, puddingless and rather forlorn condition was scarcely consistent with such lofty principles. Men may sacrifice themselves as they please, to imagined high duties and ambitions, but they have no right to marry wives and sacrifice them.—Exchange.

How People Die.

It is estimated that the average duration of human life is thirty-three years. A quarter of the people die during the seventh year and half before the seventeenth. Of every 1,000 persons one only reaches 100 years, six in 100 get to 65 and one in 500 to 80. It is further estimated that throughout the world 50,000,000 die annually, 138,000 a day, nearly 6,000 an hour, 90 a minute, or three in every two seconds.

Discretion.

Wife (whose husband, the local mayor, has just been knighted)—Have you heard from the man who offered to trace our pedigree? Husband—Yes; he has found out more than enough. Wife—What did you pay him? Husband—Fifty pounds—to hold his tongue!—London Opinion.

The Desideratum.

"George, what do you have to do when you draw some money out of a bank?" asked an innocent young wife.

"You have to put some money in the bank beforehand," replied the husband. "That's always been my experience!"

A Friendly Tip.

"My husband always is the severest critic of the gowns I wear."

"Well, judging from what I have heard, he has to go some if he is."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Prejudice, which sees what it pleases, cannot see what is plain.—Aubrey de Vere.

REAL ANARCHISTS.

The blending of politics and high finance, which would perhaps better be called low stealing, is one of the most serious signs of moral breakdown in the nation, and this blending is responsible for nine-tenths of the evils we face in America today. The most dangerous anarchist in America is the man who buys laws, who buys and coerces legislators. He is the anarchist—the dangerous anarchist, because we can't put him in jail. The race track owners, franchise sellers and privilege buyers are the anarchists.—Rabbi Wise.

UNEQUAL.

I never could believe that Providence had sent a few men into the world ready booted and spurred to ride and millions ready saddled and bridled to be ridden.—Richard Rumbold.

LIVING IN SOCIETY.

To live on the top of a pillar, to withdraw into the desert or to live in a community—all this can be provisory, necessary to men, but as definite forms it is evident error and unreason. To live a pure and holy life on a pillar or in a community is impossible, because the man is deprived of a half of life—communion with the world. To live always thus one must deceive oneself. It is evident, indeed, that just as it is impossible in the current of an impure river to separate a little circle of pure water by some chemical process, so it is impossible to live alone or in a society with some as saints in a whole world which lives in violence for money. Ground and cattle must be bought or rented. Relations must be entered into with the exterior, the non-Christian world. We cannot liberate ourselves from it, and we ought not to, except that in general we ought to abstain from those things which we need not do. We only deceive ourselves. The whole work of a discipline of Christ consists in establishing the most Christian relations with this world. —Count Tolstoy.

LIFE AND DEATH.

Life is joy, and love is power;
Death all fetters doth unbind.
Strength and wisdom only flower
When we toil for all our kind.
Hope is truth—the future giveth
More than present takes away,
And the soul forever liveth
Nearer God from day to day.
—J. R. Lowell.

VAN DRIVER WAS DISGUSTED

Thought Magistrates Should Wear Their Gowns on Street, So They Could Be Dodged.

Magistrate O'Connor was picking his disgruntled way through the rain the other day, says the New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Times-Star. He had hailed a street car from the pavement, and, sheltered under his umbrella, made for the rear platform, when a four-ton furniture van whirled on him, drawn by three briskly trotting horses. Magistrate O'Connor escaped demolition by a brisk sidewise leap. He called a remonstrance to the driver. As far as he could see, that personage had his head thrust around the corner of the furniture van, while he called back interesting items to the magistrate. Magistrate O'Connor chased him in the street car, caught him at a blockaded corner and had him arrested. The driver appeared before Magistrate O'Connor himself, when the latter had gotten into his silk robe of office.

"I could send you to the workhouse," said the still angry magistrate, "but I will let you off with a fine of $5. I intend this as a warning to all reckless drivers." The driver looked at Magistrate O'Connor sullenly, and thrust his hand into his pocket. He peeled off five ones and started for the clerk's desk to pay.

"Hold on there," said Magistrate O'Connor, gathering up a bunch of his silk gown in nervous hands. "Haven't you anything to say for yourself?"

"Yes," said the driver, sourly. "They ought to make you guys wear them Mother Hubbards on the street, so's a feller could dodge yuh."

"THIRSTY CANE" THE LATEST

Invention of Clever Frenchman That Makes Man Temperate by Drinking for Him.

A French inventor has hit upon a peculiar device for combating the drink evil. This is the "thirsty cane." Why do men drink? Because other men insist on standing them drinks. Many a big business deal is done over a glass, nowhere more so than in French cafes, and drummers would lose half their custom if they refused an appetizer offered by a customer, to whom they must of course stand another in return. The cane makes them temperate by drinking for them. Here is the inventor's description of it:

"The cane is hollow. The handle is pierced with several holes and a rubber tube inside forms a syphon. The air being expelled, the liquid is sucked up. The cane is emptied simply by turning a valve and the liquid absorbed can be poured into the street on leaving the saloon."

The cane is warranted to hold from six to ten aperitifs, according to size. It is simple to use, as the top need only be put into the liquid at intervals when the other man is not looking. The hollow cane reminds one of the "yards of ale" of medieval England. The yard was a glass measure three feet long. At one end was a bulb holding about half a pint, at the other was a trumpet-shaped mouthpiece, and the two were connected by a thin tube. The task, no easy one, was to drink the vessel dry without spilling a drop and at a single draught.

Got Useful Information.

"There's no place like a pawnshop for picking up useful hints," said the improvident man. "Every time I happen into one I glean some item of general information that almost reconciles me to the necessity for being there. On my last visit I saw another man redeeming ostrich feathers. Our uncle brought them out tightly sealed in a glass jar.

"'What did you can them for?' the man asked.

"'So they wouldn't spoil,' said the pawnbroker. 'A glass jar is the safest thing on earth to keep feathers in. Moths and dust cannot get at them, besides you can keep an eye on them easily and any trouble that might have been breeding when the feathers were brought in can be discovered and nipped in the bud.'

"That hint I consider worth going to a pawnshop for. The way things look now nobody belonging to me will ever have any ostrich plumes to take care of, but if we ever do have any I shall know what to do with them."

True Consistency.

A prominent Chicago Sunday school worker and club woman went into one of the Michigan avenue china studios to make some purchases. After examining different pieces on one table the customer turned to the artist and said: "I think I will take everything that is on the table. But what is this jar for? I never saw anything just like it before," pointing to one done in pearl lusters, about four inches high and having a fluted cover.

"That is a potpourri jar," answered the artist.

"Oh, is it?" she queried, then she turned to the artist and said in a decided manner, "I will take everything but that, and I have always made a point never to buy or have a thing to do with anything pertaining to poker."

Probably.

Sunday School Teacher—After he heard the people shouting "Saul has slain his thousands, but David has slain his tens of thousands!" what did Saul do then?

Willie (whose father "also ran")—I suppose he got right up an' hollered for a recount.—Puck.

THE MERE MAN'S VIEWPOINT

THE SENSITIVE PLANT

By BYRON WILLIAMS

I THINK sometimes that Washington Irving, ashamed of his depiction of woman and her temper in his characterization of Rip Van Winkle's wife, must have tried to patch up matters with outraged femininity by penning "The Wife." Having assured us that the outside of the house is the only side which in truth belongs to a henpecked husband, he adds insult to injury by further referring to Madam Van Winkle with the wry remark that "a tart temper never mellows with age and a sharp tongue is the only edge tool that grows keener with constant use."

Having thus doubly offended and wishing to make his peace with the gentler sex, as though in reparation, he wrote that beautiful tribute found in his "Sketch Book."

And how like old Adam this characteristic is! Men ride over women's hearts roughshod, bruising them, maiming them, making them wretched. Then they turn about and ride back posthaste with court plaster and bouquets.

Woman is like the sensitive plant in more ways than one. Bruise her and she wilts. Bruise her too often and she not only fails to "come back," as they say in the prize ring, but love and respect for the despoiler die within her.

You have seen a small boy alternately teasing and petting a kitten, making it angry that he may soothe and caress it into happiness. Some men treat women after this fashion. Others neglect them one day and buy their favor the next with overabundant kisses and new bonnets.

EVERY WOMAN A SENSITIVE PLANT

There is a type of man that gives his wife everything on earth but love—fine clothes, gems, a place in society, plenty of money to spend—and cannot understand why she is miserable. He never thinks of telling her he loves her. He allows time to shatter the goblet of happiness held to her lips that day at the marriage altar, and it never enters his occupied and stupid head that her heart cries out in wretchedness for that which he is withholding—his tender solicitude and affection.

The million acres of Cleon never can substitute for the tender emotions that every true woman craves. Golden trappings are but cold and insensate beings compared to continuous assurances of regard and love.

Under such conditions woman grows nervous and taciturn. She feels that life is empty and the love stories of her youth are falsehoods and snares. Sometimes she tries to hide her true feelings by entering the social swirl, letting herself go with an abandon that in the end brings ruin and despair.

The love of a true woman is the greatest possession of mankind. To gain it men have worked and fought and died and, having escaped death and won it, have lightly turned away and, secure in their feeling of possession, neglected to retain it.

Time and again in the divorce courts has been acted the same old, threadbare tragedy—the divorcing of a woman who has been a factor in the upbuilding of a career of success and wealth, the renouncing of a woman who has soothed the aching brow in times of sickness and instilled courage in the failing heart when calamity bore down its awful weight. Marriage seems never to have mastered the fact that a soft answer turneth away wrath and that only those things remain constant which we nourish.

Every woman is a sensitive plant. Too often bruised, she wilts and dies. Every true man who remembers his own mother and feels in his heart a great love for her sex will strive to understand and cherish the woman whose heart he possesses, keeping his affection as much in the open as when he courted and won her.

Money has deadened the public conscience to many things, but it never yet has permitted a man to wear a silk hat and a short coat without being laughed at.

It is better to be a bachelor with holes in your socks than to be married and have the holes in your wife's.

When a rich father wants a son-in-law he seldom goes to the hammock or the pool room to find him.

The Man's Mistake.

Out of loyalty to his own sex the manager of the woman's suit department discharged his young woman stenographer and hired a man. The first batch of letters dictated to the man were written to about a hundred old customers, whom he invited to examine privately a lot of exclusive garments before they were placed on sale. The day after the letters were mailed the women flocked into the store, but the fire that burned in their eyes was the fire of the avenger rather than of the bargain hunter. One word which each woman had underlined in her letter explained their wrath. The garments, so the manager had meant to say, had been designed for women of stock figure, such as they possessed, but the male stenographer had drawn on the alphabet and had written it "stocky."

"No woman on earth would have been guilty of such a mistake," growled the manager.

The next week the girl stenographer had her job back.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Great Men Tall and Short.

A recent investigator has attempted to show that Lombroso and his followers were wrong in asserting that men of genius were of small stature. Of 230 individuals of eminence he found that figures were obtainable for 103; of these sixteen were of middle height, fifty-eight above and twenty-nine below.

Americans particularly combined greatness with inches. Jefferson and Jackson were more than six feet tall. Sumner was six feet four inches, and Washington, Lincoln and Beecher were more than six feet. Among famous foreigners Tolstoy was a large man, and so were Thackeray, Bismarck and Darwin.

On the contrary, many of the world's greatest geniuses were undersized and even deformed. Napoleon, Poe, Pope, Alexander the Great, Nelson, Blake and Caesar were small men.

After all is said, genius is no respecter of rules.—New York American.

Doing Chores.

There is no time in the year when there is cessation from toil on a farm. It is different in winter; that is all. The days are shorter, the work rougher. Of course much depends upon the character of the farm. Considerable leisure is possible where few cattle are kept and general trucking done. But always there are the "chores." A remarkably elastic expression that—"doing chores." It may mean much or little. Some dairy farmers, for instance, whose serious business in life is milking cows, may potter around the farm after the morning's milking and, taking the morning's milk to the creamery or railroad station, eat their noon dinners, mend some fence, look over the harness or haul out manure, potter around some more and then say, "Guess it's about time to do the chores," meaning to milk two dozen cows or so—the real hard work of the day.—Philadelphia Press.

Believed Them True Stories.

When Dante published his "Inferno" the simplicity of the age accepted it as a true narrative of his descent into hell.

When the "Utopia" of Sir Thomas Moore was first published it occasioned a pleasant mistake. This political romance represents a perfect but visionary republic in an island supposed to have been newly discovered in America. "As this was the age of discovery," says Granger, "the learned Budaeus and others took it for a genuine history and considered it as highly expedient that missionaries should be sent thither in order to convert so wise a nation to Christianity."

It was a long while after publication that many readers were convinced that Gulliver's travels were fictitious.

Blackbird Days.

Jan. 30 and 31 and Feb. 1 are famous at Constantinople, Brescia and along the Danube and the Rhine as the "blackbird days." A curious legend says that originally all species of grackles (blackbirds) were white and that they became black because during one year in the middle ages the three days mentioned above were so cold that all the birds in Europe took refuge in the chimneys. At Brescia the three days are celebrated with a feast called "I giorni della merla," or "the feast of the transformation of the bird."

Possibly.

Mr. Briggs—Here's an article, my dear, a very interesting article, in which a prominent doctor says that a certain cure for nervousness in women is silence—complete silence. Mrs. Briggs (promptly)—I'll bet anything some fool of a man doctor wrote that!—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Easily Attained.

"I am determined to live in luxurious surroundings and eat and drink the best the land affords," said the frankly selfish man.

"That ought to be easily arranged," replied Miss Cayenne. "All you have to do is to get a situation as a butler."—Washington Star.

Wishing Them a Safe Voyage.

"Mabel and George, after much quarreling over the arrangements for their honeymoon, have decided to take the trip in an airship."

"Well, I trust that when they get above the clouds they won't have a falling out!"—Widow.

Between Octogenarians.

"I understand they sentenced him to life imprisonment?"

"Well, no; it wasn't as bad as that. He got only ninety-nine years!"—Puck.
